"That that was the plain and obvious meaning of the section of the Bill now under consideration is manifest from the observations of the Hon'ble Babu Gonesh Chunder Chunder, who was not a member of the Select Committee, to which the Hon'ble Mr. Wallis has referred. [The Hon'ble MR. COTTON said:—"Does the learned Advocate-General interpret the word 'empowered' to mean 'bound?'"] I do not. The words are of an enabling character. 'May' is, however, not frequently read as 'shall.' But when to my astonishment I found from the statement put into my hands that, instead of a rate of 8 annas per cent., only 4 annas per cent. was taken as the rate on bastis valued at Rs. 31,14,616, and one-and-a-half anna per cent. rate was taken on pucca buildings, valued at Rs. 1,51,39,953, and by so doing to shew that the amounts obtainable from these rates was, when taken with the receipts from license fees, insufficient to meet the sum of Rs. 60,000 put down as the estimated cost of the fire-brigade. The consequence was that by reducing the percentage on basti rates by one-half, and by taking the general rate at 1½ annas per cent. instead of 2 annas per cent. on pucca buildings, there is a most serious difference shown. The proceeds of the two totals come to only Rs. 24,250, and the argument was then put forward in Council that there was only Rs. 24,250 available, and that the license fees on warehouses, &c., in Calcutta, Cossipur-Chitpur, &c., would only amount to Rs. 29,000, and so there would not be sufficient to provide for the cost of the fire-brigade. When, as a matter of fact, if the principle of the Bill be taken, and it were made obligatory on the Commissioners to impose the taxes specified in the Bill, then there would certainly not be imposed on the jute and other industries a sum exceeding 50 per cent. of the cost of the fire-brigade. I am in accord with the Hon'ble Mr. Wallis in considering that the basis on which we proceeded was that there was to be this taxation on bastis and pucca buildings, and I for one was not prepared for this mode of dealing with it. It seems therefore to be advisable that the Bill should be amended in the way proposed by the hon'ble mover of the amendment. I accordingly support the motion of the Hon'ble Mr. Wallis."

The Hon'ble BABU GONESH CHUNDER CHUNDER said:—"I think that both my hon'ble friend Mr. Wallis and the learned Advocate-General are under a misapprehension in supposing that I said that in construing section 26 the word 'may' should be read 'shall' in the speech which I made the other day regarding basti owners; what I meant to say was that, under the provisions of this Bill, hut-owners were liable to pay to the extent of 8 annas per cent., and the learned Advocate-General's motion if carried would limit their liability to the extent of 4 annas only: it was better that we should support a measure which would reduce the liability of hut-owners. But I never, by what I said on that occasion, intended to convey the idea that I read the word 'may' in this section as 'shall.'

"As regards the principle of raising this tax, although I was not a member of the Select Committee, I understood the principle to be this: that the jute trade should not be made to pay the whole cost of the fire-brigade as it had hitherto done, but that the Commissioners, who had hitherto had charge of the payment of the expenses of the fire-brigade, should retain that power in their hands; that is to say, they should be primarily responsible to pay the cost to the Commissioner of Police, and they should recoup the expense which they had incurred not in the first instance by raising the taxation provided for in the Bill, but by raising funds according to the directions in the Act from jute-owners, and then by supplementing it by a tax on the general community. That I take to be the principle of the Bill. What the Hon'ble Mr. Wallis now proposes seems to be a new principle, and I therefore cannot support his amendment."

The Hon'ble MR. LEE said:—As a Member of the Select Committee I wish to say that my remembrance of the views expressed at the meeting of the Select Committee are in strict accord with the memory of the hon'ble member in charge of the Bill, that is to say, I thought it was clearly understood that the maximum rate which we fixed as leviable upon warehouses would be in practice levied up to one-half of the cost of the fire-brigade. The majority said let it be not more than one-half. Let jute, which has now been paying 120 per cent. of the cost, have hay, straw, wood, &c. to assist it, and then let them contribute up to one half the cost, and let the rest be distributed among the general rates. If this motion were carried it would be worse than if the original motion of the Hon'ble the Advocate-General had received the approval of the Council. The figures quoted by the Hon'ble Mr. Wallis are quite correct. They show as liabilities and charges at maximum rates on buildings and lands in Calcutta alone the sum of Rs. 34,500, and adding what would be received from the other municipalities, it would make a total of Rs. 37,300, leaving out of Rs. 60,000 (which is the cost of maintaining the fire-brigade) the sum of Rs. 22,700 to be collected from all warehouses, and of that sum nearly one-half would be paid by other warehouses than jute; so that we have about Rs. 11,000 to be paid by jute warehouses which last year paid over Rs. 68,000.

As regards Calcutta, I have said that it would have been better if the original proposal of the learned Advocate-General had been carried than if this amendment is carried, because we should then not have lost the whole or even up to Rs. 8,000 which we will now lose from hay, straw, wood, &c. We should have collected from them Rs. 13,000 as before, and we should have been able to apportion the rates in a way that would have been least oppressive. If the proposal had been that Cossipore and Chitpur should pay for the cost of its branch of the fire-brigade which is for yearly maintenance alone about Rs. 7,000, and that Howrah should similarly pay its branch, which also amounts to about Rs. 7,000 (and these figures in each case omit the cost of the capital outlay and charges at head-quarters), and that Calcutta should pay the rest, then the incidence of taxation on Calcutta would not have been so heavy as it would be if the Hon'ble Mr. Wallis's motion were carried.

But there is one point which has been omitted from view, and that is that the assessable value of Calcutta is an increasing value, and therefore in a few years the contribution from warehouses would decrease. The warehouses undoubtedly would be increasing in number, and we should have the absurdity of their contributions being in inverse ratio to the expense and trouble thrown upon the fire-brigade by such warehouses. I have not the least doubt that we should stand by the report of the Select Committee in this case."

The Hon'ble MR. PLAYFAIR said:—"I endorse the views expressed by the hon'ble member who moved this amendment. I understood the sense of the Select Committee to be that the municipalities should levy a rate of one-eighth per cent. on the annual value of houses and lands, and half per cent. on bastis. The Hon'ble Mr. Cotton has remarked that there is a wide difference between the words 'may' and 'shall,' but I was informed when serving on the Select Committee that the legal value of the two words, as applied to section 26 of the Bill, is the same; otherwise I should have made an energetic protest at the time against the use of the word 'may.' It was not until the issue of statement A to members of the Council by the Hon'ble Member in charge of the Bill that his personal ideas of the permissive character of section 26 became known to me. I beg leave to confirm what was said by the learned Advocate-General that that statement formed no part of the papers considered by the Select Committee. I therefore support the amendment, as it correctly embodies what I understood to be the decision of the Select Committee. I feel bound, however, again to express my regret that the Bill does not level up taxation upon the richer for the benefit of the poorer classes of the communities protected by the imposition of an infinitesimal all-round rate, which would not be more than a quarter per cent. on buildings and bastis alike."

The Hon'ble MR. LAMBERT said:—"As a member of the Select Committee I desire to say that it was not present to my mind that there should be afforded to the owners of warehouses, and especially to the jute trade, the measure of relief which is now contemplated by the amendment of the Hon'ble Mr. Wallis. Under the existing law the jute trade paid 120 or 125 per cent. of the expenses of the fire-brigade, amounting to Rs. 68,000 or Rs. 70,000. The cost of the fire-brigade is now about Rs. 58,000, and I informed the Select Committee that it was not likely largely to increase. I stated that it would in all probablity be about Rs. 60,000, and certainly it was present to my mind that the jute industry, aided by the other industries which are called dangerous, should bear one-half the cost of the brigade. By the words "primarily responsible" which appear in the Report of the Select Committee, all that I understood was that the Commissioners would be bound to pay to the Commissioner of Police when he presented his budget the means to meet the cost of the fire-brigade I did not understand that the Commissioners would first levy maximum rates, and then that whatever deficit existed would be made up by fees from warehouses. On these grounds I will certainly vote as I understood the intention of the Bill to be."

The Hon'ble DR. MAHENDRA LAL SIRCAR said:—"That not having been on the Select Committee, I cannot say what was the policy which guided their deliberations, nor is it at all necessary to ascertain whether the amendment of the Hon'ble Mr. Wallis is in accordance with, or in opposition to, that policy, whatever that might have been. The simple question before the Council is, do lands, other than basti lands and houses, other than warehouses, require the protection of the fire-brigade? I think it has been admitted by every one in this Council that they do not; and therefore the owners of these lands and houses should not be taxed at all, if possible, or, if taxed, they should be taxed in the smallest degree. The Bill places the tax on these at one-eighth per cent.; but even if you make it one-and-a-half annas per cent., it will not be fair, and, therefore, so far oppressive. For these reasons I am entirely opposed to the amendment of the Hon'ble Mr. Wallis, and I cannot see why the Council should go beyond what the Select Committee has provided."

The Hon'ble MR. WALLIS said:—"With reference to what has fallen from the last speaker, I think he is mistaken when he states that it is admitted by every member of this Council that bastis and houses other than warehouses in no way require the protection of the fire-brigade; the history of the case is very different, for it is admitted that the general public do derive considerable benefit from the brigade, and especially so the residents in bastis. I hold in my hand a letter from the Commissioner of Police to the Government of Bengal, dated the 26th of December 1890, in which he clearly shows the danger bastis offer to the town and the difficulty which is experienced in preventing fires in such places from spreading. It is not necessary for me to read this letter as it was referred to by one of the hon'ble members in a previous debate on this question, but I only put it forward to show how necessary a fire-brigade is for affording security to the town from conflagrations in bastis."

The Motion being put, the Council divided:—

Ayes 4.	Noes 8.
The Hon'ble Mr. Playfair.	The Hon'ble Maharaja Ravaneshwar Prosad Sing Bahadur.
The Hon'ble Mr. Wallis.	The Hon'ble Maulvi Syed Fazl Imam, Khan Bahadur.
The Hon'ble Mr. Risley.	The Hon'ble Babu Gonesh Chunder Chunder.
The Hon'ble Mr. Woodroffe.	The Hon'ble Dr. Mahendra Lal Sircar.
	The Hon'ble Mr. Lee.
	The Hon'ble Mr. Lambert.
	The Hon'ble Mr. Cotton.
	The Hon'ble Mr. Allen.

So the Motion was negatived.

The Hon'ble Dr. Mahendra Lal Sircar moved that clause (a) [with its proviso] of section 26 be omitted.

He said:—"I have deemed it my duty to move the omission of clause (a) of section 26, as not only unnecessary, but also as undesirable. The clause had no place in the Draft Bill, and the Select Committee have given no justification for its insertion in the amended Bill. The ostensible object of the clause is to create a source of raising funds. Now, Sir, we have provision for funds in specifically defined sources of revenue, and these are license fees from warehouses and rates from bastis and dwelling-houses. And particular care has been taken to see that these sources are competent to meet the requirements of the fire-brigade. Hence, Sir, I maintain that an additional source of revenue is unnecessary, especially when that source is undefined and uncertain. We must remember that when we are legislating for the taxation of special trades, it should be our duty to define the limits of taxation with the utmost clearness and precision; and it has been well said that that duty becomes imperative when the taxation is for a single particular purpose.

"It may be urged that the clause is intended not so much for the purpose of raising funds as for the purpose of enabling Government to discover inflammable substances not defined in section 3. But, Sir, there is a section, viz., section 41, under which 'the Local Government may, on the recommendation of the Commissioners in meeting, declare any building or place used for the storing, pressing or keeping of any substance or thing other than those specified in section 3, clause (9), of this Act, shall be a warehouse within the meaning of, and be subject to the operation of, this Act.' In this section we have provision for the detection of substances other than those specified in section 3. Where, then, is the necessity of making another provision for the same purpose?

"It may be contended that, if discretionary power is given to the Commissioners for discovering inflammable substances other than those already specified, why should not the same power be given to the Local Government in addition? What harm is there in doing so? To this my reply is, why then legislate at all? Why encumber the Act with definitions of inflammable substances? Why not leave these things to the discretion of the Commissioners, or, best of all, to that of the Local Government?

"For my part, I must confess that I am not for giving discretionary power even to the Commissioners. But if that cannot be avoided, I must beg leave to point out that the power given to the Commissioners has been very wisely restricted to one of recommendation only, the final decision resting with the Local Government. Besides, even this power of recommendation is given to the Commissioners in meeting, which makes a world of difference between absolute power and power so modified. In meeting, the Commissioners will have to discuss any recommendations they may think of making. The representatives of the citizens of Calcutta and the public of Calcutta will have ample opportunity of judging for themselves, before any recommendation can be sent in. Hence the chances of abusing this discretionary power will be infinitesimal.

"But of quite a different character, is the power which the Bill proposes to give to the Local Government. Here the power is absolute; and speaking with the utmost deference before the head of the Government, I may ask what guarantee is there that that power may not develop or rather degenerate into arbitrary power? And when such is the case, then, in addition to the Act which this Bill will become when passed, we may have no end of Acts of a different nature altogether. In fact, in my humble judgment, the clause in question, if retained, would virtually give to the Local Government power to make law without the legislature, which the instinct of modern times feels to be far from desirable.

"Lastly, Sir, I beg to point out that while we have in the clause under consideration provision of an undefined, uncertain, and therefore arbitrary character, for widening the area of taxation, there is no provision whatever for reducing the amounts of the taxes actually defined; and this, it must be admitted, is far from equitable.

"For these reasons, Sir, I look upon clause (a) of section 26 as not only unnecessary, but undesirable and objectionable. I would, therefore, move for its omission."

The Hon'ble MR. COTTON said:—"This clause finds its way in the Bill owing to my instrumentality. Under the law as it at present stands, 'jute' and 'cotton' are defined to mean jute and cotton which have not been pressed or screwed as if for shipment. Under the Bill, 'jute' means raw jute, and 'cotton' means raw cotton. Absolutely all forms of pressed jute are excluded from the operation of the present Bill. Now it seems to me very fair and reasonable that pressed jute should be excluded from the category of jute kept in warehouses. But I was not satisfied and I am not satisfied that pressed jute as it comes to Calcutta is not in many cases an inflammable material, of such nature that the buildings in which it is stored should not be specially assessed to a tax for the maintenance of a fire-brigade. There are also many other commodities of a very doubtful character which are not of the eminently inflammable character specified in clause (9) of section 3, or which could properly be included by the Lieutenant-Governor in that clause according to the powers vested in him, on the recommendation of the Commissioners in meeting, by a subsequent section of the Bill. It seems to me very possible that oil, of which we have heard so much to-day and which I am far from satisfied is of a non-inflammable character, would appropriately come under clause (a) of section 26; and there are many other materials which, although not so inflammable as jute or cotton, or hay, straw, &c., are sufficiently inflammable to make them liable to the payment of a special tax. That is why this provision found its way in the Bill. The rate leviable in such cases would be two and-a-half per cent. only on the assessable annual value, and the limit of taxation in any case is fixed at Rs. 100 in order to prevent an excessive rate being levied. It was intended to draw a distinction between commodities of an eminently inflammable character and those which are less inflammable, and therefore power is reserved, in the hands of the Government, to meet special cases."

The Hon'ble MR. WOODROFFE said:—"This matter of baled jute, to which the hon'ble member in charge of the Bill has referred, was considered by the Select Committee, who reported to the Council that they had considered the advisability of bringing baled jute within the provisions of section 26 of the amended Bill, but had determined not to do so."

The Motion was put and negatived.

The Hon'ble MR. WALLIS, by leave of the Council, withdrew the motion of which he had given notice, that in clauses (b) and (c) of section 26, for the words "not exceeding" the word "of" be substituted.

The Hon'ble BABU GONESH CHUNDER CHUNDER, by leave of the Council, withdrew the motion of which he had given notice, that clause (c) and sub-section (2) of section 26 be omitted.

The following notices of amendment were by leave withdrawn:—

The Hon'ble Mr. Wallis to move that in clause (b) of section 26, for the words "not exceeding" the word "of" be substituted.

The Hon'ble Babu Gonesh Chunder Chunder to move that clause (c) and sub-section (2) of section 26 be omitted.

The Hon'ble Mr. Wallis to move that in clause (c) of section 26, for the words "not exceeding" the words "of" be substituted.

The Council was adjourned to Saturday, the 11th instant.

RESOLUTION ON THE REPORT ON THE WORKING OF THE EDEN SANITARIUM FOR THE YEAR 1892.

MUNICIPAL DEPARTMENT—MEDICAL.

No. 947Med.

Calcutta, the 14th March 1893.

RESOLUTION.

READ—

The report on the working of the Eden Sanitarium for the year 1892.

Read also—

Report for the year 1891 and the Resolution recorded upon it.

The following table compares the admissions into the Institution during the past eight years:—

	1885.	1886.	1887.	1888.	1889.	1890.	1891.	1892.
Patients ...	192	273	344	336	370	316	356	370
Relatives and attendants	68	120	84	107	122	86	151	44
Total ...	260	393	428	443	492	402	507	414

The number of patients admitted in 1892 was the same as in 1889, which had been the highest on record, but there was a considerable falling off in the number of relatives and attendants. The number of these latter is said to vary according to the nature of the cases admitted, and it is further explained that the unattractiveness of the past season operated to reduce the number of visitors other than invalids. The increase in the number of the sick testifies that the benefits which the Institution is capable of conferring on invalids are becoming more fully appreciated. Orders have recently been issued sanctioning a grant of Rs. 2,000 to the Inspector-General of Civil Hospitals to meet the cost of sending convalescent European sailors from the Calcutta and Howrah Hospitals to the Sanitarium, and if this amount is properly utilized, the Lieutenant-Governor trusts that it will add materially to the usefulness of the Institution.

2. Of the four classes into which patients are divided in the Sanitarium, the second is the most popular, judging from the results of the past four years which are exhibited in the following table:—

	1889.	1890.	1891.	1892.
First class	93	57	75	59
Intermediate class	103	79	123	90
Second class	171	164	169	146
Third „	125	102	140	119
Total	492	402	507	414

3. The Sanitarium, as usual, was open from the 1st March to 30th November. Of the 370 persons treated, 298 were adults—172 males and 126 females. The number of children treated has steadily increased from 46 in 1890 and 58 in 1891 to 72 in 1892. The daily average number of persons residing in the Institution, including 12 patients from the Calcutta hospitals, who occupy free beds, was 35·8, against 44·18 in 1891 and 36·03 in 1890. The average number of days spent in the institution by each patient was 34·24, against 39·08 in 1891 and 27·3 in 1890. By far the largest number of persons admitted into the Sanitarium were suffering from malarial fever or its effects, more than 50 per cent. of the total admissions being due either directly or indirectly to this cause. Forty surgical operations were performed during the year, against 35 in the preceding year, all of which were successful. There were 8 deaths during the year—2 due to dysentery, 1 to cancer, 1 to disease of the liver, 3 to diseases of the nervous system, and 1 to bronchitis. Most of these cases were in an advanced stage of disease when admitted.

4. The total income of the year amounted to Rs. 31,524 (against Rs. 38,665 in 1891), but this amount apparently includes a sum of Rs. 150 due from patients still outstanding. The details of receipts are Rs. 30,047 received from patients, Rs. 1,060 subscriptions, Rs. 207 interest, and Rs. 59 miscellaneous receipts. The falling off in receipts was due to the smaller number of friends and attendants admitted during the year. The total expenditure amounted to Rs. 31,307 (against Rs. 34,249 in the previous year), and the year closed with a credit balance of Rs. 7,918.

5. A fund was started during the year with the object of providing a free cot for children needing a change to the hills, but the amount raised was not sufficient to form a permanent endowment. The Lieutenant-Governor hopes that the effort will not be abandoned, as the known suitablity of the Darjeeling climate for sick children would render such an institution most useful. The cot was occupied from 23rd June to 4th November.

6. The Lieutenant-Governor has noticed with satisfaction that the superior establishment attached to the Sanitarium worked well during the year. His thanks are due to the Superintendent and to the Committee of Management for the very efficient administration of the Institution.

By order of the Lieutenant-Governor of Bengal,

J. A. BOURDILLON,

Offg. Secretary to the Government of Bengal.

Explanation.—... indicates that no rain has fallen. If the return for any day has not been received, the corresponding space is left blank. If any of the returns are wanting, the corresponding spaces in the total rainfall columns are left blank. With reference to the column of rainy days, the definition of a rainy day is when at least 0·1 inch of rain has fallen.

CALCUTTA, the 14*th March* 1893.

SUMMARY OF THE METEOROLOGICAL AND RAINFALL OBSERVATIONS TAKEN IN BENGAL FOR THE WEEK ENDING 8 A.M., SATURDAY, THE 11TH OF MARCH 1893.

DURING the second half of the previous week fine settled weather had prevailed over the whole province, but conditions were decidedly unusual for the season on account of the very low temperature and decidedly high pressure which obtained. On March the 5th, or the first day of the present week, pressure was falling slowly in the west of the province, while it was rising slowly to moderately at the central and eastern stations. Winds also became southerly at some of the Bihar stations, and temperature remained rather largely in defect of the normal On this day a well defined barometric depression entered North-Western India, moving in an easterly direction, and its centre was near Deesa, while a small subsidiary depression appeared near Peshawar. On the 6th an area of barometric depression existed between Sutna and Nowgong, while relatively low pressure existed over a large part of Western India. In Bengal pressure was rising at the western and south-western stations, and falling at the eastern and northern stations, but an area of disturbed conditions had reached the south-western districts, and rain was reported on the 6th from almost all stations in Orissa and at a considerable number of stations in Bihar and Chota Nagpur. On the 7th the areas of low pressure had either filled up or had passed away in an easterly direction; a moderate fall of pressure had taken place over Bengal, but pressure was still above the normal by amounts usually exceeding a tenth of an inch, and weather generally again became fair and settled, and only a few local showers occurred in Bihar and Chota Nagpur. On the 8th the barometric changes in Bengal were small, and at most stations pressure was rising, and again conditions appeared fairly settled, but from some cause not easily explainable, the sky began to cloud over rapidly, and notwithstanding the fact that a further rapid increase of pressure took place from the 8th to the 9th, by which the general pressure over the province became in excess of the normal by about a sixth of an inch, very disturbed conditions set in. Thus moderate rain was reported in almost all districts of the province on the 9th, and light irregular winds prevailed in all districts, and at the southern stations in particular north-easterly winds were commonly reported. With the general rainfall accompanying the heavily clouded skies, temperature was still unusually low, the defects being largest at the western stations, where they ranged up to 14°. A slight reaction then set in, and pressure began to fall slowly to moderately on the 10th, but notwithstanding the falling pressure, weather conditions began to improve, and on this day practically no rainfall was reported, and the sky began to clear rather rapidly. On the 11th instant the fall of pressure continued, the fall exceeding a twentieth of an inch in the north-eastern districts of Bengal, but still pressure remained in excess of the normal by more that a tenth of an inch. Winds were northerly at the eastern and southern stations, and generally southerly in Bihar and Chota Nagpur, probably in connection with a small barometric depression in North-Western India, while weather remained fine in all districts except parts of Bihar and Chota Nagpur, where again showers had fallen. Thus again the week has been one of somewhat disturbed conditions with moderate rain in all districts.

Pressure—Has been unusually high throughout the week, and the mean for the period has been in excess of the normal by about 0·12″ or 0·13″. The distribution of this excess, however, has been irregular, and thus at such stations as Rangpur, Jalpaiguri, Bhagalpur, Darbhanga, Motihari, and Chapra, the excess has equalled 0·16″ and upwards. On the other hand, the excess has been less than a tenth of an inch at Chittagong, and at Darjeeling it has only equalled 0·06.″

Temperature—Has again been unusually low throughout the week, and for the whole province the defect in the mean temperature for the period has been 4·8°, while defects exceeding five-and-a-half degrees have been recorded in South-West Bengal and Chota Nagpur.

The distribution of temperature during the week and its variation from the normal value are best seen in the table below, where the average maximum, minimum, and mean temperatures for the week at nine typical stations in different districts of the province are compared with the normal values for the period. The defect again, it will be seen, has been most largely marked in the maximum or day temperatures, which at such stations as Cuttack, Burdwan, Gaya, and Hazaribagh have been about 10° below the normal, while at Calcutta the average maximum or day temperatures have been only 81·8,° or 7 4° below the normal for the week :—

Rainfall.—The heaviest falls during the week have occurred in Orissa, which has received an average amount of 0·82 inch, and in Chota Nagpur with a fall of 0·52 inch. The falls in South-West Bengal and North Bengal have averaged from a third to a quarter of an inch, and Bihar has received a tenth of an inch, but the falls in East Bengal have been very small. The actual falls during the week have been largely in excess of the normal in Orissa, moderately in excess in Chota Nagpur and South-West Bengal, and slightly in excess in all other districts except East Bengal, where the fall has been rather largely in defect of the normal, the actual fall not equalling a tenth of the usual amount.

The following table gives the summary of the temperature and rainfall data of each of the seven meteorological divisions of the province for the week ending Saturday, the 11th of March 1893 :—

The mean pressure, temperature, &c., are deduced from the traces of the Barograph and Thermograph and from observations made at 6h, 10h, 16h and 22h.

The maximum and minimum temperatures are obtained from self-registering thermometers. All the thermometers are verified, and the readings have been corrected to a standard constructed and verified at the Kew Observatory. They are exposed under a thatched shed open at the sides, and are suspended four feet above the ground.

The barometer readings are corrected approximately to those of the standard, Newman's No. 86, formerly at the Surveyor-General's Office.

The hygrometric elements are obtained from Tables III, IV, and V of the official tables computed in the Meteorological Office, and based on Regnault's modifications of August's formula.

The directions and the movement of the wind are taken from the trace of a Beckley's anemograph.

The mouth of the rain-gauge is one foot above the ground.

Comparative Statement of principal commodities carried on the Eastern Bengal State Railway during the month of December 1892.

INCREASES.

	Tons.		Tons.
Coal	6,282
Railway and Flotilla consumption principally.
Jute, screwed	1,629	Tea	470
Silliguri, Haldibari and Saidpur contributed about two-thirds of the increase.		The increase was in despatches from Jalpaiguri. Much of the crop could not be brought earlier into the market owing to the cart roads having been washed away by heavy rains.
Kerosine oil	3,665
Due to the prohibition of carriage by boat within certain limits of the port of Calcutta.

DECREASES.

	Tons.		Tons.
		Jute, unscrewed	3,587
Rice	503	The principal decreases are in despatches from Serajgunge, Kushtea, Siliguri, Julpaiguri and Hilli. The market was uncertain in December.
Charkai and Goalundo show the principal decreases said to be due to short crop.

DRAFT REVISED WATER-RATE RULES FOR THE MIDNAPORE CANAL.

The 20th March 1893.

No. 75.—Notification.—In exercise of the powers conferred on him by sections 99 and 78 of Act III (B.C.) of 1876, the Hon'ble the Lieutenant-Governor proposes to make the following rules and to fix the undermentioned rates to be charged for water supplied from the Midnapore Canal. These rules and rates will supersede those now in force.

C. W. ODLING,
Secretary to the Govt. of Bengal.

1. The Divisional Canal Officer is responsible for maintaining the canal in an efficient state of repair, for providing drainage channels where necessary, and generally for all engineering work involved in its management, as well as for the distribution of water to lessees. The word "canal" is here used as defined in section 3 of the Act.

2. The Deputy Collector is responsible for the assessment and collection of water-rates accruing to Government from the canal.

3. Water shall not be distributed otherwise than on the application of a lessee, or to a person in whose favour a provisional license under rule 15 has been issued. Such application may be made verbally or in writing to any subordinate in charge of that part of the canal from which water is required.

4. If any lessee apply for water to the Deputy Collector or one of his subordinates verbally, he shall be directed to address himself to an irrigation officer or subordinate. If he makes such an application in writing, his petition shall be forwarded direct by the zilladar, to whom it is addressed, to the Sub-divisional Canal Officer in charge of that part of the canal from which the petitioner's village is supplied.

5. The Divisional Canal Officer shall map out the irrigable area into blocks in accordance with the natural features of the ground, and so determine that the whole block shall be irrigable from one outlet, or from one set of outlets. So far as may be practicable, the blocks shall be separated by drainage lines.

6. Each block determined as above shall be numbered and recorded with its irrigable area in registers to be maintained by the Divisional Canal Officers and Deputy Collector. The blocks shall also be marked on maps to be maintained by the same officers.

7. Leases for not more than five years may be granted for the whole irrigable area of a block, or, subject to the provisions of Rule 13, for definite parts of a block, under the following conditions:—

I.—Ordinarily the whole irrigable area of any village, so far as situated within the block, must be included in the lease.

II—All leases within one block shall be granted, so that they shall expire on the same date.

III.—In order to equalise the areas to be dealt with in each year, the date of expiry of the leases in each block shall be determined by the Divisional Canal Officer in consultation with the Deputy Collector, so that, as far as practicable, one-fifth of the total area usually irrigated may fall out of lease in each year.

IV.- No permit shall be granted, when the supply of water must of necessity be delivered across an unleased area, unless a village channel exists, which, in the opinion of the Sub-divisional Canal Officer, will deliver water without waste across the unleased area.

8. The rates to be charged for water supplied between June and November, whether by flow or lift, to lessees on application shall be—

For a term of five years—Re. 1 8 per acre for each season.

For one year or for water supplied on a provisional license for which a permit for a term of years is not subsequently issued, Rs. 3 per acre.

Provided that the leases, whether new or renewals, required for shorter terms than five years in order to develope the system of blocks as explained above, shall be charged Re. 1-8 per acre only. Otherwise, in addition to the rate of Re. 1-8 mentioned above, an extra rate of 12 annas per acre shall in the first year only be charged on leases for less than five and more than one year.

9. For the supply of water, when available, for winter crops, a rate of Rs. 2-8 per acre per season shall be charged.

10. For the unauthorized use of canal water a rate of Rs. 5 per acre, or such less rate as may be sanctioned by the Deputy Collector, shall be charged.

11. Application for water-leases under section 74 of the Act shall be presented to the zilladar of the division in which the applicant's land lies.

12. Every application for a water-lease shall contain the following particulars:—

1.—Name and residence of applicant.

2.—Name of pargana, mahal and village in which the land to be irrigated is situated.

3.—Total area for the irrigation of which the application is made and its boundaries, and if the lands to be irrigated lie in separate chaks, the name of each chak.

4.—Names of the raiyats whose lands are to be irrigated, and the quantity of land held by each.

5.—Name of the canal and number of distributary from which water is required.

6.—Signatures of the applicants.

13. A separate application must be presented for lands in each village, but tehsilalaida or other lands lying within the village boundary at the time of survey may be included.

14. Before a permit for a term of years is granted, the written consent of the Divisional Canal Officer shall be obtained, but permits for one year only and provisional licenses may be issued with the written assent of the Sub-divisional Canal Officer. The Deputy Collector shall on the day of issue forward a copy of all permits granted to the Divisional Canal Officer.

15. When a water-lease is granted, a kabuliyat shall be taken in a form approved by Government, and a "permit" shall be given to the lessee or lessees in a form similar to that prescribed in Schedule C of the Act. Pending the completion of a lease, the zilladar may issue a provisional license for the supply of water to an area covered by an application.

16. On the issue of a permit or provisional license, the zilladar shall forward to the Sub-divisional Canal Officer direct a requisition requesting him to supply water to the lessee on application. This requisition shall be kept by the Canal Officer till January 1st next following, and shall then be returned to the Deputy Collector. On the back should be noted the several dates on which the village was supplied with water. A fresh requisition shall be issued on or before June 1st, and returned on or before January 1st, each year, till the lease expires.

17. When it comes to the knowledge of the Sub-divisional Canal Officer that canal water has been taken without authority, he shall hold a local investigation and transmit the record thereof to the Deputy Collector. Separate proceedings shall be taken in the case of each village irrigated without authority.

18. On receipt of the record mentioned in Rule 17, and after hearing any objection which may be raised, the Deputy Collector shall determine whether water-rates can be legally charged, and if so, he shall proceed to assess, at the rate provided in rule 10, the land irrigated without authority.

19. The statements of the amounts demandable for water-rates leviable under the rules in force shall be prepared under the supervision and signature of the Deputy Collector in such form as shall from time to time be sanctioned by the Lieutenant-Governor. Persons charged under rule 10 or 18 shall be served, by post or otherwise, with a statement showing the amounts charged to enable them to lodge an appeal to the Collector under section 91 of the Act if they desire to do so.

20. Should it be proved, after due enquiry, that the supply of water given to any leased area is habitually wasted, or used for the irrigation of lands not under lease, it shall be competent for the Superintending Canal Officer, with the concurrence of the Collector, to direct that the lease shall be cancelled with effect from the 1st of June next following.

21. The rates for water supplied from June to November shall in each season fall due on the 1st January following, but the Deputy Collector may require one-half of the rates due on applications filed after the 1st of September to be paid in advance, and may refuse to issue a permit for more than one year. The rates for water supplied for winter crops shall fall due on the 1st April following.

22. Water-rates imposed under rule 10 or 18 shall fall due as soon as the assessment is made, and shall be realized at once.

23. The Superintending Canal Officer may, with the concurrence of the Collector, direct the Deputy Collector to –

I.—Cease to issue permits for the irrigation of lands in villages where there have been constant difficulties in realizing water-rates until all the arrears of water-rates due are paid up, and also, if specially so ordered, unless half the amount due under new applications is paid in advance. An order under this rule shall be in force for the time stated therein, which shall not exceed three years.

II.—Cancel any five years lease if on the 1st of June of any year water-rates to the extent of half the demand for one year are in arrears.

24. Remission of water-rates, either in whole or part, as the case may require, shall be granted by the Deputy Collector for—

I.—Errors in the assessment of rates.

II.—Injury to the crop on a leased area caused by deficient supply of water.

Provided a written application for remission has been made 15 days at least before the crop is cut.

In regard to applications under II, the written opinion of the Divisional Canal Officer shall be obtained and form part of the record of the case.

25. The Deputy Collector, with the written consent of the Divisional Canal Officer, may grant remissions of water-rates, either in whole or part, for injury to the crops on leased areas caused by excess of water due to deficient drainage.

26. The Deputy Collector may, with the written assent of the Divisional Canal Officer, commute rates charged under rules 10 and 18 to those chargeable for water supplied on application, provided that a lease either for a term of years or for the season has been subsequently executed for the lands in question.

27. Remissions on other grounds than the above require the sanction of Government.

28. In cases where sums due on account of water-rates cannot be collected owing to the death, bankruptcy, or absconding of the defaulter, the amount which is non-realizable may be written off as irrecoverable on the authority of the Collector.

29. Before awarding compensation under section 16 of the Act, or making a reference under section 17 of the Act, the Collector shall obtain the written opinion of the Superintending Canal Officer, and his written opinion shall form part of the record of the proceedings.

30. The Deputy Collector may distribute amongst village mookhyas, who give efficient assistance in collecting water-rates, and generally in his operations under Act III (B C.) of 1876, a commission calculated in such manner as he may think fit, provided the total amount paid shall not exceed 6 pies in the rupee on the total water-rates collected during the year.

IRRIGATION.

The 14th February 1893.

No. 35.—Notification.—The following rules, having reference to all the lines of navigation included in the following canal systems, viz., the Orissa Canals, the Midnapore Canal with branch to Narainghar, the Hijili Tidal Canal, the Orissa Coast Canal, and the Sone Canals, are proposed to be passed by the Lieutenant-Governor under the provisions of section XI of the "Canals Act, 1864," No. V (B.C.), in supersession of those now in force.

1. Every vessel, entering or passing along any of the above lines of navigation, shall be liable to measurement for the purpose of ascertaining the amount of toll the vessel should pay according to the schedule of rates authorized by Government to be charged on the line of navigation.

2. The tonnage of every vessel, except loose timber and raft, whether laden or empty, shall, for the purposes of the "Canals Act, 1864," and of these rules, be determined by the following measurements:—

(a) The product in feet of half the length of the vessel, measured along the water-line and round the contour of the vessel from centre of stem to centre of stern-post, multiplied by the interior greatest breadth of the vessel or by the greatest breadth of the cargo, should this overhang, or, as in the case of logs, be lashed alongside, multiplied by the greatest depth from the water-line to the bottom of the keel of the vessel, is to be taken as equal to the number of maunds upon which toll shall be levied.

(b) The measurement of the length is to be made in feet, rejecting fractions of a foot, and the measurement of the breadth and depth in feet and quarters of feet, rejecting portions of less than a quarter of a foot.

(c) In calculating the amount of toll to be levied, any portion of 100 maunds less than 10 maunds is to be omitted.

(d) In calculating the amount of toll to be levied on steamers, an allowance of one-third the total maundage as found under clauses a, b, and c is to be made for engine space.

3. Every vessel entering or passing along any of the above lines of navigation shall be furnished with a ticket on paying the prescribed toll. The ticket shall specify the station at which it has been issued, the name of the person in charge of the vessel, the date on which the voyage commenced, the point to which the vessel may proceed on the line of navigation, the maundage of the vessel, the amount of toll charged, the number of days allowed for the voyage, and the date of such last day. The number of days so allowed without additional payment shall be calculated at the rate of one day for every eight miles, or portion of eight miles, to be traversed together with one day for every two hundred maunds of measurement. In the case of rafts, one day for every five miles shall be allowed.

4. Toll may be paid at the first station, either for the entire number of toll-stations on the line of navigation, or for any less number of stations.

5. The tickets thus given may be demanded for inspection by any duly authorised navigation officer, and must be kept on board and at hand for that purpose. They must be shown at each toll-station the vessel has to pass, as a passport that no further payment of toll is to be demanded. The tickets shall be delivered up at the last toll-station.

Navigation officers shall have authority to check-measure vessels whenever they consider it necessary, and if the toll due according to the check-measurement exceeds that originally paid, the difference shall be payable at the toll station of check-measurement, or at the next toll-station which the vessel may arrive at, if the check-measurement was made at some point other than a toll-station. The officer collecting the difference shall endorse the ticket, showing the measurements, and noting the amount recovered in excess of the toll originally paid.

6. Owners or hirers of vessels may compound, by the payment of a fixed sum, for the use of the whole or portion of any of the above lines of navigation for any period that may be agreed upon, not exceeding one year. Each vessel so compounded for shall be furnished with a ticket showing the amount of toll paid, the period for which the toll has been compounded for, and the limits of the line of navigation within which the vessel may pass. Such ticket shall be kept on board the vessel, and shall be produced when required under Rule 5, but shall be given up only on the date of the expiry of the period for which granted, and at the station from whence issued.

7. Duplicates of lost tickets, of which the numbers and dates of entry can be satisfactorily established, will be granted by the officers in charge of toll-stations on payment of a fee of one rupee.

8. Every vessel which does not complete its voyage within the number of days allowed by Rule 3 shall, for each day or part of a day in excess, be liable to an extra charge equal to the full amount of toll as determined by Rule 2. No charge for demurrage under this rule shall exceed rupees ten per month for any boat. The Superintending Engineer may at his discretion exempt any boats on any line of navigation, or any portion of a line of navigation, from the payment required by this rule.

9. The Superintending Engineer in charge of the Circle in which the line of navigation is situated, shall fix such places as he may consider necessary, at which vessels may remain while waiting for cargo or otherwise, without any charge. Any vessel which on the completion of a voyage or on entering the canal remains for a period of 24 hours or more at any place in the line of navigation other than one so fixed, shall be liable to an extra charge per diem as provided in rule 8, which shall be recoverable as toll.

10. The Superintending Engineer in charge of the Circle shall notify at what places on the line of navigation vessels may be ordinarily loaded or unloaded. Permission to load or unload at places other than those so notified, may be granted in special cases by the navigation officers. Should any vessel be loaded or unloaded at any place other than those notified by the Superintending Engineer, and without the permission specified above having been obtained, the person in charge of the vessel and the consignor or consignee of the goods shall, on conviction before a Magistrate, be liable to a fine not exceeding Rs. 10 for each offence.

11. Except with the written permission of a navigation officer, no goods or cargo may be deposited on any bank, berm, or land appertaining to the canal at places other than those notified by the Superintending Engineer of the Circle, as available for such a purpose. Any person depositing goods in contravention of the above rule, shall, on conviction before a Magistrate, be liable to a fine not exceeding Rs. 50.

12. Navigation officers may order consignors, or consignees, or owners to remove their goods from the places notified as available for depositing cargo under rule 11. Goods not finally removed within a period of six days from the receipt of such order, shall be liable to a charge of four annas per 100 maunds, for each day or part of a day after the expiry of the six days, until finally removed.

13. No vessel of dimensions exceeding those which shall be notified for each line of navigation by the Superintending Engineer in charge of the Circle will be allowed to enter such line of navigation or to pass along it.

14. It will not be compulsory for the locks to be opened to single vessels of less than 500 maunds burden, except in the case of mail or despatch boats or passenger or cargo boats in tow of steam vessels; but the locks shall be opened for the passage of boats at least twice a day.

15. Mooring.—All vessels stopping at night must be moored head and stern, to the bank of the channel, or wherever specially ordered.

Only one line of vessels shall be allowed to pass along a canal or to make fast along and in a line with the canal banks or along and in a line with the banks of the river entrances to the locks, and no vessel shall be made fast, or be placed outside of vessels so secured, without the permission of a navigation officer. No vessel shall, however, be placed in such a position as to endanger the safety of other vessels, to obstruct their passage, or to impede the navigation.

16. Rule of the Road.—When under sail, vessels are to keep in the centre of the channel. When being tracked, vessels are, wherever practicable, to keep to starboard or right side of the channel. Vessels meeting in a canal, except when being tracked, must keep to their right when passing, and when one vessel overtakes another, the former must pass on the left. Vessels, one of which is sailing and the other steaming, meeting in a canal, the sailing vessel to keep to the leeward A steamer passing any vessel is bound to go at a speed not greater than half speed.

17. Lights and Signals —All vessels, whether travelling or moored in a line of navigation, must between sunset and sunrise carry a white light, in a lantern on the fore part of the vessel where it can be distinctly seen from ahead. All steam-vessels in motion shall carry the lights prescribed by the Board of Trade Regulations. Barges or boats attached to a steam-vessel, whether in motion or moored, shall carry the white light prescribed above.

Where signals are used no vessel shall enter or attempt to enter the entrance channel of a lock when a red flag or red light is displayed at the end of the lock next her. Steam-vessels approaching a lock shall whistle when a mile distant, and shall continue to whistle at intervals until the signal intimating that the lock is open or closed is displayed, or, if no signals are used, until arrival.

18. Crews and attendants.—Every vessel when stationary shall be securely fastened, and shall at all times have some person in attendance on board. Every vessel in motion shall have a sufficient crew.

19. Fittings.—Vessels must have their masts, high awnings, and funnels fitted so that they can be let down with ease and speed, and no bamboos or poles shall be erected on or by vessels when at anchor.

20. Conduct of navigation.—Vessels are prohibited from making fast to any portion of the lockgates or gearing, and steamers are prohibited from making fast the tow lines of their boats until the latter are clear of the locks. Steamers are prohibited from lashing boats or barges alongside while proceeding within locks. Towing ropes of a greater length than 50 feet are not to be used in a canal. The throwing of cinders into any canal is prohibited; they are to be deposited on the banks.

21. In every case of wreck or obstruction of the channel by sunken vessels, the Supervisor of the line of navigation or of a part of it may call upon the person in charge of the vessel to remove the same without delay, and shall give every reasonable assistance towards so doing. But should the owner of the vessel or raft be not forthcoming, or should he not use reasonable expedition in removing the obstruction, or should he decline or fail to use proper assistance which may be offered to him by the Supervisor, this officer may, under the provisions of section XIV of the Act, undertake the removal of the obstruction himself at the cost of the owner of the boat, recovering the expense in the manner laid down in section IX of the "Canals Act, 1864."

22. If the Supervisor be unable to ascertain the name and place of business or of abode of the owner of the cargo of any vessel or boats seized under the "Canals Act," he shall notify the seizure in the most public manner available.

23. In the event of any damage or injury being occasioned to the canal works by wilfulness or negligence on the part of any person in charge of a vessel, the navigation officers may detain the vessel at any point within the canal for a period not exceeding 48 hours; provided that, within that period, the navigation officers shall lodge a complaint against such person in charge of the vessel before a Magistrate under section XVI of the "Canals Act."

24. For any contravention of rules 15, 16, 17, 18, 19 and 20, the person in charge of the vessel shall, on conviction before a Magistrate, be liable to a fine not exceeding Rs. 50.

25. All offences against the provisions of these rules shall be punishable as provided for in section XVIII of the "Canals Act, 1864," and all fines imposed may be recovered in the manner mentioned in section XVII of the same Act.

26. The term "navigation officers" as used in the foregoing rules shall include the persons alluded to in section VIII of the "Canals Act, 1864," and all Public Works Officers or Subordinates in charge of the canal not below the grade of sub-overseer.

27. The canals may be closed once a year for effecting the necessary repairs to them on one month's notice of the intention so to close them being given; but in the event of any sudden emergency, the canals may be closed at any time without prior notice, and no claim in such case by owners of vessels or others for compensation on account of detention shall be entertained.

DISTRICT ROAD FUND.

NOTIFICATION No. 65.

Dated Calcutta, the 17th March 1893.

THE subjoined annual accounts and abstracts from the reports of the District Road Committees of the districts of Hazaribagh, Lohardaga, Manbhum, and Singhbhum for the year 1891-92, together with the remarks of the Commissioner of the Chota Nagpur Division thereon, are published for general information.

F. J. JOHNSTONE,
Secy. to the Govt. of Bengal, P. W. Dept.

Abstract of a report by the Chairman of the District Road Committee, Hazáribágh, on the operations of the Committee for the year 1891-92.

Four meetings of the District Committee were held during the year under review, in all of which quorums were obtained, the average attendance being 10·7. With a few exceptions, the members do not take much interest in the working of the Act.

The following is a summary of the business transacted by the Committee during the year under report:—

(1) Preparation of the budget estimates of receipts and expenditure for the year 1892-93.
(2) Passing of estimates of different works to be executed in 1892-93.
(3) Passing of annual accounts and report for 1891-92.
(4) Preparation of rules for pensions of the Committee's employés.
(5) Consideration of the draft model rules for Provident Fund.

The accounts were, as usual, audited by a Sub-Committee appointed under section 174 of the Act.

There is only one Branch Committee in the district, viz., at Giridih. There were six meetings of the Branch Committee during the year and the average attendance was 4·1. The Sub-divisional Officer reports that most of the members did not take mu ch interest in the working of the Act, and that some of the gentlemen took no part in any of the meetings held during the year.

The road cess in the district was, as in the previous year, levied at the maximum rates prescribed by law.

The demand on account of cess on lands and mines during the year was Rs. 47,195 against Rs. 46,173 in the previous year. The increase of Rs. 1,022 was the result of the annual valuation of mines under section 79 of the Act.

The total amount for realisation during the year, including the arrears (Rs. 9,456) outstanding at close of the previous year, was Rs. 56,651. Of this amount, Rs. 55,470 (including Rs. 1,635 paid in advance in previous years) were collected, leaving a balance of Rs. 1,181. A further sum of Rs. 1,837 was collected as advance for future years. The percentage of collections on current demand is Rs. 117·5.

Most of the arrears due at close of the year were due from revenue-paying estates in which the last kist fell due on the 28th March, or three days before the close of the year.

Original Works.—The only original works taken up during the year under review were the construction of a third class inspection bungalow at Jori on the Balumat and Sherghati road, and the gravelling of 6 miles of the road from Gola to Dakagurrah vid Dimra. Owing to the very limited funds at the disposal of the Committee, no other work could be undertaken.

Repairs.—Thirty-four miles of metalled and 64 miles of gravelled roads have been maintained at a cost respectively of Rs. 6,133-2-9 and Rs. 3,718-11 3, and are in good condition. Fair-weather roads, aggregating about 403 miles, have been kept up in fair condition and fit for cart traffic at a cost of Rs. 16,179-0-1.

Village Roads.—Village roads, aggregating about 350 miles, have been maintained in passable order at a cost of Rs. 9,370-15-6. One hundred and eight miles of these roads are under the District Committee and the remainder under the Branch Committee. Rs. 5,500 were made over to the Branch Committee for repairs to village communications during the year. Out of this amount Rs. 5,152-14-11 were expended, viz., Rs. 754-5-2 departmentally by the Vice-Chairman, Rs. 554-14-5 by one native and two European members, and Rs 3,843-11-4 by contract. A further sum of Rs. 70-2 was contributed by the East Indian Railway Company towards the cost of the Level-crossing road at Giridhi. The repairs of the village road from Gawan to Dorunda were entrusted to Tekait Todul Narain Singh, zamindar of Gadi Gawan, and that from Karharbari to Sookri to Doctor Saise, Manager, East Indian Railway Company, Giridhi. Both these gentlemen are reported to have taken much interest in the work.

Arboriculture.—No new trees were planted during the year. The existing trees, about 14,000 in number, have been maintained at a cost of Rs. 1,132, and are reported to be generally in a flourishing condition.

Nursery.—There is only one nursery garden in the Road Cess Office compound containing about 1,465 plants.

Staging bungalows and sarais.—There is only one staging bungalow, viz., at Ramghur. The income from it was Rs. 52-12 during the year, and its maintenance cost Rs. 261-10-5. There is only one cart sarai in the district, viz, at Bagodar, on the Grand Trunk Road. The income from it was Rs. 92, and its maintenance cost Rs. 179-5-5.

BASANTA KUMAR BOSE,
Vice-Chairman.

Explanatory memorandum attached to the District Road Fund Account for the year 1891-92.

THE works provided for in the estimates for 1891-92 were not fully done for want of rains, and also certain works not being properly done, payments were withheld; hence the closing balance exceeded the limit prescribed in paragraph 9 of the Government Resolution No. 4228R.C., of the 18th December 1885. Provisions have, however, been made for disposal of the excess balance in the budget for the current year.

The transfer of allotments noted in antique type in column 2 of Part II of the Account has been sanctioned by the Commissioner (vide his letter No. 362R.C., dated the 28th March 1892).

BASANTA K. SEN,
Vice-Chairman.

Abstract of a report by the Deputy Commissioner and Chairman of the District Road Committee, Lohardaga, on the operations of the Committee for the year 1891-92.

THE attendance of the non-official members of the District Road Cess Committee and of the Palamau Branch Road Cess Committee during the year under report was unsatisfactory.

The following is the summary of business transacted at the meetings of the District Road Cess Committee held during the year under report:—

(a) Passing the budget estimate.
(b) Passing the annual account for 1890-91.
(c) Fixing the rate of road cess to be levied during the year.
(d) Passing estimates submitted by the District Engineer for the repairs of different roads during 1891-92.
(e) Appointing contractors for the construction and repairs of roads for 1891-92.
(f) Electing Vice-Chairman under section 129.
(g) Determining the details of establishment and the salaries to be attached to each office under section 133.
(h) Passing the general statement under section 141.
(i) Disposing of other miscellaneous business.

The demand on account of cess on lands and mines during the year, including arrears of last year, amounted to Rs. 55,177. Of this Rs. 504 was collected in advance during the previous year, and Rs. 51,856 has been collected within the year under report, thus leaving a balance of Rs. 3,317 outstanding on the 31st March 1892. In addition to the above a sum of Rs. 605 was collected in advance on account of the ensuing year 1892-93. Out of Rs. 51,961 collected during the year on account of current and future years, Rs. 46,312 only credited in the Lohardaga Treasury within the year, and Rs. 5,649 collected and credited into the Palamau Treasury, but not included in the accounts of the Lohardaga Treasury.

The cess was levied at the maximum rate: there was little or no difficulty in collecting it at head-quarters. In Palamau, however, the same difficulty still exists as was noticed last year.

The accounts of the year were duly examined and audited by a Sub-Committee consisting of the Chairman and two other English-knowing members.

Original Works—Ranchi-Gola road.—In a bridge of 4 spans of 20 feet each, the waterway has increased by raising the abutments and piers 4 feet, and the sâl timber platform which had been in a dilapidated state was thoroughly renewed.

Repairs.—The roads of the district were maintained passable by petty or patch repairs, renewal of gravelling and reconstruction or repairs of temporary bridges. Besides seven miles of Ranchi-Lohardaga road, the last six miles of Lohardaga-Chattra road, half a mile of Ranchi-Pithoria road, four miles of Ranchi-Palkote road, one-and-a-half miles of Palma-Lohardaga road, and a small portion of Orenga stream-Daltongunge road, were newly gravelled, and a diversion about 500 feet long in the 4th and 5th miles of the Daltongunge-Maharajgunge road constructed during the year.

Village roads.—The following roads were constructed:—

(1) A road from Chutia to Subernorekha bridge, one mile.
(2) A diversion in Bundu-Poadari road, together with masonry work of a bridge of 20 feet span with rubble masonry abutment and timber roadway.
(3) Road from Ghatdoor to Silli, four miles.
(4) Road from Chapka towards Kotam, six miles.

Repairs executed to about 200 miles of village roads, in the Sadar sub-division about 170 miles, and in Palamau sub-division some 30 miles.

Arboriculture.—About 400 seedlings from nurseries at Ranchi, Lohardaga, and Daltongunge were planted along various roads to fill up vacancies of last year. Plants along 72 miles of roads maintained and new Dellas supplied in many cases.

Staging bungalows and huts.—Chandwa and Lohardaga bungalows were thoroughly repaired, and considerably improved. Repairs were also executed in three other bungalows and 13 huts.

Tools and plant.—One stone road roller for consolidation of gravels was constructed and several other tools, mathematical instruments and office furniture purchased and repaired.

Generally it may be said that more attention has been paid to good and lasting work than to quantity of work.

Accounts.—The monthly accounts of the Road Fund and of the District Engineer's office were examined by the Vice-Chairman and two other English-knowing members of the Committee who were appointed for the purpose.

The Local Auditor inspected the Chairman's and the District Engineer's offices in March 1892, and the result was very satisfactory.

The work has all been done under the contract system, and advances to contractors, except a few cases, have been adjusted.

A. EVANS GORDON, Colonel,

Chairman, District Road Cess Committee, Lohardaga.

Abstract of a report by the Chairman of the District Road Committee, Manbhum, on the operations of the Committee for the year 1891-92.

Working of the Cess Act IX B.C.) of 1880.—The demands, collections, and balances of Road and Public Works cesses, for the year 1891-92 are shown in the following statements—

NAME OF DISTRICT.	Arrears outstanding from last year.	Demand for the year.	Total (columns 2 and 3).	Previously paid in advance for the present year.	Net demand.	Collected on account of arrears during the year.	Collection on account of current year made within the year.	Collected in advance on account of future years.	Total collection.	Gross balance.	Remission.	Net balance.	REMARKS.
	Rs.	Rs.	Rs.	Rs.	Rs.	Rs.	Rs.	Rs.	Rs.	Rs.	Rs.	Rs.

Lohardaga ...	41	125	166	...	166	41	42	..	83	83	..	83
Total ...	19, 93	84,805	1,03 898	3	1,03,895	19,088	54,918	3	74,009	29,889	34	29,855

The outstanding balance for the year 1890-91 was Rs. 19,093, and the demand for the year was Rs. 84,805 (excluding Rs. 649 shown in class D of the return for Laikdi coal mines assessed in Burdwan district) against Rs. 7,424 and Rs. 84,775 respectively for the two preceding years. There was an increase of Rs. 30 in the demand owing to the new assessment of certain quarries and jungles. The collection of the year was Rs. 74,009 against Rs. 73,252 in the previous year, showing an increase of Rs. 757. The percentage of collection on the total demand was Rs. 71·232 against Rs. 76·365 of the previous year 1890-91. Out of the gross balance Rs. 29,889, Rs. 34 had been remitted by order of the Commissioner. The net balance to be realised was Rs. 29,855, of which Rs. 13,956 has been realised in the current year (1892-93), and the remainder being chiefly due to the non-realisation of Rs. 14,054 from the Pachete estate for the kist ending 28th March 1892. Steps are being taken to realise the amount due. The cesses were not paid regularly during the year under report in all cases. There is a general tendency to put off payment until the certificate procedure is put in force. The practice of intimating to owners of mines, quarries, and jungles the amount of their indebtedness by means of post-cards was continued, and was found to work satisfactorily. The revenue-paying estates, Pachete and Jaipur, invariably fall into arrears, and their owners seldom pay the cesses until steps are taken under the Certificate Act. As regards the Digwari estates, the cess levied on them is generally realised through the ghatwali Inspector of Police, no certificates being issued in these cases.

C. A. S. BEDFORD,
Chairman.

Explanatory Note.

1. The excess expenditure of Rs. 1,287-1-9 under head "Establishment and Contingencies of office of collection" is on account of arrears of monthly contribution towards pension from July 1872 up to March 1890, viz., Rs. 1,261-5-8, and the balance, Rs. 25-12-1, is on account of cost of service of notices, &c., not recoverable under sections 72, 78, and 81 of the Cess Act IX (B.C.) of 1880.

2. The excess expenditure of Rs. 360-0-11 under head "Percentage cost of establishment, &c.," is owing to payment made during the year for the year previous.

3. The excess expenditure in some of the items of "Repair Works" is apparent, but not actual, as the budget provision is for the year under report, whereas the expenditure includes payment for works provided for in the previous year.

C. A. S. BEDFORD,
Chairman, District Road Committee.

Abstract of a report by the Chairman of the District Road Committee, Singhbhum, on the operations of the Committee for the year 1891-92.

THE accounts were examined by the Sub-Committee of Audit and passed by the District Road Committee at a special meeting held on the 10th May 1892.

The opening balance at the credit of the District Road Fund on the 1st April 1891 was Rs. 3,880-15-8, and the receipts under the several heads during the year under report, including deposits and advances, amounted to Rs. 16,910-10-7, making up a total of Rs. 20,791-10-3. The total expenditure during the year was Rs. 17,856-10-10, leaving a balance of Rs. 2,935-15-5 available for expenditure in the current year.

There were six meetings of the Committee held during the year under report, with an average attendance of 5·16 members. In each of the meetings a sufficient number of members were present to form a quorum.

The following is a summary of the business done by the Road Committee during the year:—

(a) Preparation and passing of the budget estimates for 1892-93.
(b) Revising the budget estimates for 1891-92 in view to meeting the cost of executing some additional works on some of the roads and the additional cost of the revaluation establishment.
(c) Passing the District Road Fund annual accounts and reports for 1890-91.
(d) Sanctioning contracts both for original and repair works.
(e) Consideration of the District Engineer's application for granting him mileage rate when travelling.
(f) Disposing of miscellaneous business.

Dr. S. J. Manook held the office of the Vice-Chairman throughout the year. There has been no change in the executive establishment during the year of report.

The monthly accounts of the Committee's office as well as that of the District Engineer's were audited by a Sub-Committee consisting of the Vice-Chairman and two other members under section 174 of the Act. The accounts were also audited by the Examiner of Local Accounts during the year.

During the year under report the whole of the current demand of Rs. 3,745 on account of road cess on lands and mines, &c., was realised. There was no arrear to recover in the year under report.

The road cess was levied as in the previous years at the maximum rate of half-an-anna in the rupee both on the annual value of lands and on the net profits of quarries and jungles as prescribed in section 148 of the Act.

The Committee spent Rs. 204-15 in maintaining and improving some village roads in Dhalbhum in the year under report.

Abstract of a report by the District Engineer, Singhbum, on the works carried out by him during the year 1891-92.

Chaibassa Bend road.—Besides the maintenance of the road, an aggregate length of over 3 miles of it has been gravelled. Raising of a few low places beyond Ghatsilla has been also done. It was some six years ago that the gravelling of those places that had become miry, and in consequence impassable for cart traffic during the rains, was first taken up, and it is during the year under report that the gravelling of such places was finished up to Bend. Ramps to the approaches of unbridged nalas have been maintained and cased.

Nursingar-Bhairagora road.—Maintenance of the road, including jungle and drain clearing and repairs to wooden culverts, has been done.

Chaibassa-Subornorekha river road.—The road surface has been maintained and an aggregate length of about a mile of road has been gravelled. Ramps to the approaches of nalas five in number have been kept in good order.

Subornorekha ghat.—The rock cutting earthwork portion of the work has been done, and the little finishing off which remains to be done will be completed in the current year.

Chaibassa-Kharsowan road.—A diversion has been made from the 8th mile of the road to the Amda station on the Bengal-Nagpur Railway at the expense of the District Road Fund, and from Amda to Kharsowan at the expense of the Kharsowan Chief, so that the road may be useful as a feeder to the Railway. Small wooden culverts for local drainage have been constructed in the diversion, and ramps with gradient of 1 in 20 have been cut in the approaches to the Sanjoy and Sankua nalas.

Chakradharpur-Koksinga road.—Nearly the whole length has been looked after. There had been numerous timber culverts on this road, but a great many of these as they were in a dilapidated condition have been dismantled, and ramps have been cut for passage of traffic. The whole of the repairs executed was, however, of a petty nature.

Chaibassa-Jyntgur road—The surface of the road and the numerous timber culverts thereon have been maintained. Portions of the road that owing to their being in clayey soil become heavy and almost impassable for carts during the rains have been gravelled, the aggregate length of such gravelling being over a mile.

V Class roads.—The most important of these is the Chaibassa-Katbari road which extends from Chaibassa to Katbari, a distance of 20 miles. Besides maintenance of the surface of the road and the culverts thereon, some of the heavy portions of an aggregate length of about 2 miles have been gravelled. All the other V class roads have been maintained, though, owing to their being little cart traffic on these, the necessary repairs were of a petty nature.

Village roads.—One village road from Kalkapur to Kapargadi ghat (on the 36th mile of the Chaibassa Bend road), a length of about 3 miles, was repaired. The improvement of another village road in Dhalbhum, that from Assonboni to Durkhu, has been taken up. Jungle cutting and uprooting of trees have been finished. Side drains have been cut on only a portion of the road.

Test relief works.—In the middle of August of the year under report, information of distress was received and arrangements were made to commence test relief works in Awla, Lalgur and Bharbharia Pirs which were chiefly reported to be affected. Repairs to neglected village roads were undertaken in Majgown, Kharbund and Bharbharia on the piecework system, paying the labourers at the rate of anna 1-9 for a 100 cubic feet of earthwork, which amount was found to be the cost of a full ration at bazar rates then prevailing. But the rates offered failing to attract labourers, the test relief works were stopped within a month. The very little work that was done cost Rs. 135-8-9, which was debited to the Gamaria-Kharbund (No. 14) and Kharbund-Majgown (No. 15) village roads

(8) Discussing Executive Engineer, Chota Nagpur Division's letter No. 3171, dated 17th August 1891, forwarded under cover of Commissioner's memorandum No. 156R.C., of 22nd idem, asking for an expression of opinion from the local authorities in Manbhum as to whether they would take charge of the Chase-Golbera road and on what terms.
(9) Discussing Superintendent of Post Office, Manbhum Division's letter No. 1662M., dated 2nd December 1891, wishing to be informed what amount of contribution the Deputy Commissioner of Manbhum would be prepared to make from District Road Funds towards the monthly subsidy of Rs. 600 required for the purpose of opening a mail cart line between Purulia and Ranchi.

(11) Sanctioning annual budget estimate of the Committee's receipts and expenditure for the year 1892-93.
(12) Committee's proposal for the re-nomination of Dr. H. W. Working of the Branch Road Committee at Gobindpur.—Babu Mohendro Nath Mookerjee, Sub-divisional Officer of Gobindpur, was Chairman of the Branch Road Committee. Only one meeting was held for accepting tenders and selecting contractors for the different roads in the sub-division, the repairs to the station roads in the sub-division having been resolved to be undertaken departmentally.

Working establishment.—There has been no material change in the executive establishment of the Committee during the year under report.

Works done during the year.—The budget grant and outlay under each head are shown below :—

* Though most of the works were completed within the year, final payments for some of them could not be made for want of funds owing to arrears in collection.

Original works.—The expenditure under this head during the year was Rs. 2,734. The works executed were as follows :—

(1) Metalling approach road to the Adra Railway station.
(2) Metalling a portion of the 31th mile of the Raghunathpur-Bankura road.
(3) Metalling approach road to the Anara station.
(4) Metalling Reuny road.

Repair works.—The total expenditure under this head during the year was Rs. 24,467 distributed amongst different classes of roads. The works chiefly consisted of the annual maintenance of the several roads in this district, including repairs to the bridges and culverts on them, and were generally much the same as in previous years. In addition to keeping them up in fair condition generally, the following improvements were effected:—

(a) The level crossings of roads Nos. 3, 5, 7, and 11 left in an unfinished condition by the Railway Company were properly adjusted and restored at the expense of the Railway Company.

(b) The Purulia-Manbazar road, the Bolorampur-Barrabazar road, the first and second sections of the Jhapra-Gobindpur road, and the Roghunathpur-Hazaribagh road in the Sadar sub-division, and the third and fourth sections of the Jhapra-Gobindpur road, and the Gobindpur-Giridhi road in the Gobindpur sub-division were much improved by gravelling in places which used to be very heavy during the rains.

(c) The Chirkunda-Laikdi section of the Chirkunda-Patlabari road in the Gobindpur sub-division (a length of about a mile) was thoroughly overhauled and remetalled to meet the requirements of heavy coal traffic.

In village roads, besides their usual annual maintenance, the following additions and improvements were effected:—

(1) A new road about one mile in length was constructed to connect the Ramkanali station of the Bengal-Nagpur Railway with the Purulia-Barakar road near village Gobag (beginning of the 13th mile).

(2) A large quantity of earthwork was done on the road from the Adra Railway station to Kashipur (a distance of about six miles) taken up for construction last year, and the whole length is now generally good enough for country carts.

(3) Barrabazar-Manbazar road has been extended another mile or so, i.e., about 14 out of the 20 miles from Barrabazar are now fit for cart traffic.

(4) The Jeypore-Begoonkodur road and the Jhalda-Torang road in the Sadar subdivision were improved by gravelling the low lying portions, and the Nowagar-Rajgunj road in the Gobindpur sub-division, by easing down steep ghats in several places.

Besides the above, the bridges and culverts and the inspection bungalows on all the roads were repaired and kept up in good condition.

Petty construction and repairs.—The works executed under this head consisted only of the annual petty repairs to the several cart serais both in the Sadar and the Gobindpur sub-divisions. These serai sheds were thoroughly repaired and the compounds of some of them were materially improved.

Arboriculture.—Under this head nothing has been done during the past year beyond planting and maintaining some trees in and close to Purulia. Our attempts to induce village headmen to plant and rear trees along roadsides under promises of reward when the trees attain six feet in height have met with partial success. There is still, however, considerable room for improvement in this respect.

No. 286R.C., dated Ranchi, the 5th November 1892.

FROM—W. H. GRIMLEY, ESQ., Commissioner of the Chota Nagpur Division,
TO—The Secretary to the Government of Bengal, Public Works Department.

I HAVE the honor to submit the accounts and reports of the District Road Committees of this division for the year ending March 1892 with the following brief review.

2. The following table shows the number of members in each Committee, the number of meetings held during the year, and the percentage of average attendance at each meeting :—

	No. of members.	No. of meetings held.	Percentage of average attendance.
Hazáribágh	24	4	44·5
Lohardaga	13	10	33·5
Singhbhum	10	6	51·6
Manbhum	13	10	38·4

The percentage of attendance was the highest in Singhbhum and the lowest in Lohardaga. In the latter district the attendance of non-official members was unsatisfactory. There were three Branch Committees, viz., one at Giridih, one at Daltonganj, and one at Gobindpur. The Giridih Branch Committee held three meetings during the year. It is reported that most of the members of this Committee did not take much interest in the working of the Act, and that some of the members took no part in any of the meetings held during the year. The Daltonganj Branch Committee held two meetings during the year. Here, as in the District Road Committee of Lohardaga, the attendance of non-official members was unsatisfactory. The Gobindpur Branch Committee held only one meeting during the year.

3. During the past year the cess was levied in all the districts at the maximum rate allowed by the law. The following table shows the opening balances, receipts, charges, and closing balances of the several District Road Committees during the year:—

	Hazaribagh.	Lohardaga.	Singhbhum.	Manbhum.	Total.
	Rs.	Rs.	Rs.	Rs.	Rs.
Opening balance ...	19,703	24,424	3,881	10,803	58,811
Receipts ...	64,726	55,256	16,911	39,414	1,76,307
Total ...	84,429	79,680	20,792	50,217	2,35,118
Charges ...	65,410	65,910	17,856	43,604	1,92,780
Closing balances ...	19,019	13,770	2,936	6,613	42,338

It is satisfactory to observe that the closing balances in Lohardaga, Singhbhum and Manbhum have been considerably reduced. In Hazaribagh some of the works provided for in the budget estimate for the year could not be fully done for want of rain, and some were not properly done. Hence the closing balance here exceeded the limit of one quarter's revenue prescribed in paragraph 9 of the Government Resolution No. 4228R.C., dated the 18th December 1885. Provisions have, however, been made for the disposal of the excess balance in the budget estimate for the current year.

4. The following table shows the revenue of each Committee, excluding advances and deposits, the expenditure on original and repair works and on the establishment employed on works, the percentage of cost of this establishment on the amount spent on works, as also the percentage of total expenditure on works, including establishment calculated on the revenue:—

District.	Revenue.	Amount spent on original works.	Amount spent on repair works.	Total expenditure on original and repair works.	Expenditure on account of establishment employed on works.	Total expenditure on works including establishment employed on them.	Percentage of cost of the establishment on work calculated on the amount actually spent on works.	Percentage of total expenditure on works, including establishment calculated on the revenue.
	Rs.	Rs.	Rs.	Rs.	Rs.	Rs.	Rs.	Rs.
Hazáribágh ...	58,843	2,666	38,196	40,862	8,068	48,930	19·7	83·1
Lohardaga ...	50,981	3,314	35,832	39,646	9,064	47,710	23·4	93·5
Singhbhum ...	14,163	5,001	3,826	8,827	2,824	11,651	31·9	82·2
Manbhum ..	37,323	2,734	24,467	27,201	7,406	34,607	27·2	92·7
Total ...	1,61,309	13,715	1,01,831	1,15,536	27,362	1,42,898	23·6	88·5

The amounts spent by the several Committees on original works are small in all districts except Singhbhum. It is owing to insufficiency of funds and the length of roads to be maintained being great. The only original works undertaken during the year by the District Road Committee, Hazáribágh, were the construction of a third class inspection bungalow on the Balumath-Sherghatty road, and the gravelling of six miles of the Gola-Dakagurah vid Dámra road. The District Road Committee of Lohardaga increased during the year the waterway of a bridge of four spans of 20 feet each on the Ranchi-Gola road by raising the abutments and piers by four feet, and renewed thoroughly the sál timber platform on the bridge. The Singhbhum District Road Committee metalled during the year certain heavy portions of the Chaibassa-Bend, Chaibassa-Subornorekha river, Chaibassa-Khursowan, Chaibassa-Jaintigurh and the Chaibassa-Katbari roads at the total cost of Rs. 4,127, and improved the Subornorekha ghat on the Chaibassa-Subornarekha river road at the cost of Rs. 799. Besides these, it constructed a village road at the cost of Rs. 75. The Manbhum District Road Committee metalled two approach roads to the Bengal-Nagpur Railway, a portion of the 34th mile of the road No. 7 in the schedule of roads of that district, and the Renny road in the town of Purulia at the aggregate cost of Rs. 2,734. The repair works under the several Committees consisted mainly of maintenance of roads. No new trees on the sides of roads were planted during the year by the District Road Committee, Hazáribágh. The existing trees numbering 14,000 were maintained in a flourishing condition at the cost of Rs. 1,132, included under heading Repairs. In Lohardaga about 400 seedlings from the nurseries at Ranchi, Lohardaga and Daltonganj were planted along various roads to fill up vacancies, and plantation along 72 miles of roads maintained at the cost of Rs. 1,474, included under heading Repairs as in Hazáribágh. In Singhbhum the expenditure on arboriculture amounted to Rs. 7 only. In Manbhum nothing more could be done beyond planting and maintaining some trees in and close to the town of Purulia. The attempts made in this district, to induce village headmen to plant and rear trees along roadsides under promises of reward when the trees attain the height of six feet have met with partial success.

5. The District Engineer and the subordinate establishment appear to have worked well during the year.

Preamble.

WHEREAS it is expedient to make provision for the licensing of Warehouses and the maintenance of a Fire-brigade; It is hereby enacted as follows:—

CHAPTER I.

Preliminary.

Title, application and commencement.

1. (1) This Act may be called the Licensed Warehouse and Fire-brigade Act, 1893.

(2) It applies to Calcutta, as defined by the Calcutta Municipal Consolidation Act, 1888, and to such portions of the Suburbs thereof as are for the time being subject to the operation of Bengal Act II of 1866; also to the municipality of Howrah and to any other municipality in the neighbourhood of Calcutta or Howrah, to which its provisions may be extended by an order of the Local Government to be published in the Calcutta Gazette.

(3) It shall come into force from the date on which it may be published in the Calcutta Gazette, with the assent of the Governor-General.

Repeal.

2. (1) Act IV of 1883 is hereby repealed:

Saving clause.

(2) But all rules, orders, declarations, financial arrangements and appointments made under the said Act and which are now in force, shall be deemed to have been made under this Act, so far as they are not inconsistent with the provisions thereof.

Definitions.

3. In this Act, unless there is something repugnant in the subject or context,—

(1) "basti land" means land which the owner lets out for the building of huts, in such manner that the tenant of the land is the owner of the hut: And "hut" includes any structure erected on such land, whether roofed with tiles or otherwise, and whether constructed with bricks, earth or other materials.

(2) "cotton" means loose raw cotton:

(3) "jute" means raw jute, either loose or in drums, and loose jute-cuttings and rejections:

(4) "Magistrate" means and includes a Presidency Magistrate and a Magistrate of the first class:

(5) "person" includes an undivided Hindu family, a firm or company, or association of individuals whether incorporated or not:

(6) "The Commissioner of Police" means the officer vested with the administration of police in the town of Calcutta under the Calcutta Police Act, 1866, and any Act amending the same;

(7) "The Commissioners" mean, in respect of Calcutta, the Corporation of Calcutta; and in respect of Howrah and the other municipalities to which this Act applies or may hereafter be extended, the Municipal Commissioners of each of the municipalities concerned:

(8) "warehouse" means any building or place used for the storing, or pressing, or keeping of jute, cotton, resin, varnish, pitch, tar, hay, straw, rags, tallow, wood or other inflammable substance or thing for the time being subject to the operation of this Act.

CHAPTER II.

Licensed Warehouses.

Warehouse not to be used till licensed.

4. From and after the commencement of this Act, no building or place shall be used as a warehouse unless the owner or occupier thereof shall have previously obtained a license from the Commissioners for such use under this Act.

License of previously licensed building or place.

5. The owner or occupier of any building or place for which there is in existence at the commencement of this Act a license granted under the Jute Warehouse and Fire-brigade Act of 1872 or 1879, or the Licensed Warehouse and Fire-brigade Act of 1883, shall, upon application in writing to the Chairman of the Commissioners, be entitled to obtain a license from the Commissioners therefor as a warehouse under this Act, subject to the payment to the Commissioners of such annual fee as is hereinafter provided.

License of new warehouse.

6. Any person proposing to use any building or place as a warehouse within the area to which this Act applies, or may hereafter be extended, and who, at the commencement of this Act, does not hold such license under any of the said aforementioned previous Acts, shall, with his application for a license therefor, send to the Chairman of the Commissioners a plan in duplicate of such building or place prepared on a scale of 8 feet to the inch, and showing—

(a) the boundaries of such building or place;

(b) the position of the engines and furnaces used or proposed to be used in the warehouse;

(c) the space, if any, which has been reserved for the loading and unloading of carts thereat:

and thereupon it shall be within the discretion of the Chairman of the Commissioners to grant a license from the Commissioners therefor as a warehouse under this Act, subject to the payment to the Commissioners of such annual fee as is hereinafter provided, or to refuse a license for the same:

Provided that when a license is refused, the reason for such refusal shall be recorded in writing.

Period for disposal of application for license.

7. Every application for a license under the last preceding section shall be disposed of within thirty days from the date of its being received by the Chairman of the Commissioners, and if not disposed of within that period, the applicant shall not be liable to any penalties under this Act for the use, after the expiration of the said period of thirty days, of the building or place as a warehouse in respect of which such application shall have been made, so long as such application is not finally refused by an order in writing under the hand of the Chairman of the Commissioners setting forth the grounds for such refusal.

Term and conditions of license.

8. Licenses under section six of this Act may be granted either permanently or for such term of years as the Chairman of the Commissioners shall think fit, and shall be subject to the following conditions, namely:—

(1) that the warehouse shall at all times be open to the inspection of an officer appointed by the Commissioner of Police. Such officer shall be a member of the Fire-brigade, but shall not be a member of any Police Force:

(2) that the annual fee imposed in respect thereof be paid as in that case made and provided.

Special Committee may exercise powers of Chairman.

9. (1) With the consent of the Chairman of the Commissioners, any special Committee of the Commissioners, not less than three or more than five in number whom the Commissioners in meeting shall in that behalf appoint, may exercise the powers and discretion under this Act vested in the Chairman of the Commissioners.

(2) The proceedings of such Committee shall not be submitted to the Commissioners in meeting or be subject to revision by them.

Annual fee of license.

10. The annual fee payable in respect of any license shall not exceed ten per centum per annum on the annual value of the warehouse as it is assessed to the payment of the municipal taxes, less ten per centum on the outlay incurred in respect of the means and appliances therein or appertaining thereto for preventing or extinguishing fire:

Provided that the annual fee payable by any owner or occupier in respect of any license shall not exceed seven hundred and fifty rupees, and that the estimated total annual amount to be derived from such fees shall not exceed fifty rupees per centum of the amount required to meet the cost of the fire-brigade, as shown in the budget mentioned in section twenty-six of this Act:

Provided also that the owner or occupier of adjacent warehouses and the godowns, yards or compounds auxiliary to such warehouses shall not be bound to take out more than one license in respect of such warehouses, godowns, yards and compounds.

Change in occupation of warehouse to be notified.

11. Whenever and so often as a change in the occupation of any warehouse occurs, the person entering into occupation of the same shall, within two weeks of his so entering into occupation, give notice in writing to the Chairman of the Commissioners of such change of occupation; and shall thereupon pay to the Commissioners a fee of five rupees: and his name shall accordingly be substituted in the license in respect of such warehouse for the name of the last occupier.

Chairman may apply to Magistrate to suspend license of warehouse.

12. (1) Whenever the Chairman of the Commissioners receives credible information that any of the conditions to which the license of any warehouse shall be subject has been broken by the holder thereof, he may apply in writing, setting forth the substance of such information, to a Magistrate for the issue of a summons upon the holder of the license to show cause why such license should not be cancelled or suspended, and may also apply to such Magistrate to suspend in the meantime such license pending the hearing of the case.

(2) The Magistrate shall not make an order suspending such license unless he is satisfied that it is necessary to prevent or obviate immediate danger or injury of a serious kind.

(3) The summons issued under this section shall be served upon the said holder of the license named therein in the manner provided in the Code of Criminal Procedure, 1882, for the service of summons.

Magistrate may cancel or suspend license.

13. The Magistrate, before whom the case instituted under the last preceding section is brought on for disposal, may, if after taking evidence he be satisfied that there exist reasonable and proper grounds for cancelling or suspending the license, cancel such license, or may order the same, for such time as he may think fit, to be suspended; and may impose such conditions as to the reversal of such order of cancelment or suspension as may be consistent with the provisions of this Act, for the grant of a license for a warehouse.

CHAPTER III.

14. Any person who, without taking out a license, uses any building or place as a warehouse shall be liable, on conviction before a Magistrate, to a penalty not exceeding fifty rupees for each day during which he may so use or continue to use such warehouse.

Penalty for using warehouse after refusal, &c., of license.

The northern half of Victoria bridge having been swept away, vessels are cautioned against navigating that portion of the river until an examination of the bottom has been made, when the best navigable channel will be marked. As soon as practicable, a red light will be exhibited at night time at the broken end of the bridge.

The Floating Magazine recently moored at Eagle Farm is now above Lytton, well over on the South shore.

The Hospital hulk Beatrice is at present moored in the Fairway above the Naval stores.

THE British Admiralty has given notice (No. 71 of 1893) that buoys, as undermentioned, now mark Asaguri, Suzuki, Morita, and Shichiko reefs, Nanao south harbour:—

1.—Asaguri reef (Serpent's Tail) buoy, black conical, and surmounted by two triangles (points together), is moored close northward of the reef, in 2½ fathoms water, with Triangle point bearing S.E., distant 7 cables.

2.—Suzuki reef (Fairway bank) buoy, red conical, and surmounted by a square, is moored close eastward of the reef, in 2½ fathoms water, with Fukura saki bearing E. by S., distant 4½ cables.

3.—Morita reef buoy, black conical, and surmounted by a triangle, lies on the north-east edge of the reef, on the south side of the harbour entrance, in one fathom water, with Matsusaki, bearing N.N.E. ½ E., distant 8 cables.

4.—Shichiko reef buoy, red conical, and surmounted by a globe, is placed on the south-east edge of the reef, on the north side of the harbour entrance, in 2½ fathoms water, with Matsusaki bearing N.W. ¼ N., distant 1½ cables.

The depths given are at low water spring tides.

A note that "The positions of the buoys can only be considered as approximate" has been placed on the Admiralty plan.

THE British Admiralty has given notice (No. 72 of 1893) that on 1st March 1893 the buoys marking the approaches and channel to Aden anchorage will be painted in accordance with the proposed International System of Buoyage, that is, Starboard hand buoys entering from seaward will be Red; Port hand buoys Black.

The buoys will also be altered in shape in conformity with the proposed System, when it is necessary to replace them.

Also, that from and after 11th January 1893, the vessel marking the wreck of the S.S. Anadyr (lying westward of the light vessel) will exhibit the usual wreck marking signals. The vessel is painted green, with the word Wreck in white letters on her topsides.

The semaphore on the Port Officer's flagstaff is now dropped at 1h. P.M. Madras mean time, corresponding to 19h. 39m. 0·6s. Greenwich mean time. A gun is fired at noon and at 8h. P.M. Madras mean time.

When the semaphore fails to drop, or is dropped incorrectly, the signal C.V.N.J. (failed) of the Commercial Code is hoisted immediately, and kept flying for half an hour. When this is the case, the semaphore is dropped again at 2h. P.M., Madras mean time, corresponding to 20h. 39m 0·6s. Greenwich mean time.

MALARIA IN SHAHABAD.

The Hon'ble MAULVI SYED FAZL IMAM, Khan Bahadur, asked the following question:—

"Whether Government is aware that the construction of irrigation channels in Shahabad has introduced malaria into the district, and that the health of the people has greatly deteriorated in consequence; and, if so, whether the Government has taken any steps or will take steps, and of what nature, to check the spread of the disease."

The Hon'ble Mr. COTTON replied as follows:—"The alleged deterioration of the health of the district of Shahabad, subsequently to the introduction of canal irrigation, has repeatedly attracted the attention of Government. It was brought prominently to the notice of the Sone Canal Committee of 1887, and their remarks on the subject will be found in paragraphs 69 to 77 of their report. The increase of malarial fever was considered to be established. The suggestion that irrigation should be prohibited in the immediate vicinity of towns and villages was thought to be of little practical value, because canal water is rarely used in those lands. With regard to drainage, the Committee held that it was the duty of the authorities to remove obstructions which caused the accumulation of surface water, but that there were no means of dealing effectually with the question of subsoil drainage so as to prevent the rise of the water level in the subsoil generally. Mr. Odling, the Chief Engineer and Secretary to this Government in the Irrigation Department, in a lecture, which he delivered at the Engineering College, Sibpur, on the 23rd February last (a copy of which I shall have much pleasure in placing in the hon'ble member's hands), has touched on this subject. He has shown that rice irrigation requires an artificial supply of about 30 inches of water, which is an addition of from 50 to 75 per cent. to the natural rainfall of the country. This necessarily affects the health of the district; but so long as the people insist on planting rice, which gives an easy and certain outturn in preference to wheat or other cold-weather cereals, this deterioration in health cannot be avoided, except by such measures of despotic interference with the choice of the agriculturists as to the crops they wish to raise, as Government would be very unwilling to adopt. He further asserts that the canals have not stopped the surface drainage of the country, but have on the contrary improved it. Before the canals were constructed 'there was not a stream or small river which was not every two or three miles practically closed by embankments, sometimes a mile in length, constructed across the stream. These embankments were mostly constructed for fishing purposes, but not unfrequently with the view of raising the level of the water and utilising it for purposes of irrigation.' These embankments have to a great extent been cleared away, the channels being taken up as public water-courses on which no encroachments will in future be allowed. The river Kao, for instance, which is the main drainage channel of the district, was, when irrigation works were commenced, completely closed at different points of its course by 14 embankments crossing the stream, and as a drainage channel it had ceased to exist. This has now been remedied, and the same process is going on elsewhere wherever it is found necessary, and this appears to be the most practical step that Government can take towards remedying the mischief to health which the lavish use of canal water for rice cultivation is liable to cause."

LICENSED WAREHOUSE AND FIRE-BRIGADE BILL.

The Hon'ble MR. COTTON moved that the clauses of the Bill, for the regulation of Warehouses and the maintenance of a Fire-brigade, be further considered for settlement in the form recommended by the Select Committee.

The Motion was put and agreed to.

The Hon'ble MR. WOODROFFE moved that, after section 28, the following section be added:—

'The Fire-brigade Fund formed under this Act, and the fire-engines, fire-escapes, horses, accoutrements and other equipments and appurtenances of the fire-brigade, and all stations, buildings and places heretofore acquired, provided or built out of any fund appropriated to the maintenance of the fire-brigade under Act IV of 1883, or any of the Acts repealed thereby, or which shall hereafter be acquired, provided or built under the provisions of this Act, are hereby vested in, and shall belong to, the Commissioners, subject to the control of the Commissioner of Police.'

He said:—"Under the Bill, as it at present stands, and so far as it has received the approbation of the Council, there will be imposed on the general public, through the Commissioners of Calcutta, a considerable charge for the maintenance and up-keep of the fire-brigade, which was not laid on the public before. The general public will have to pay at least fifty per cent. of such expenditure. Under the Bill there is a provision for the acquisition of sites for fire-brigade stations, and for the purchase of the various equipments and appurtenances required for the fire-brigade; but there is no provision in the Bill vesting those sites and things in any body. They ought, I conceive, to be vested in the Commissioners as representing the general public. Next, it appears to be very desirable that the control of the fire-brigade should, in express terms, be secured to the Commissioner of Police. The section, the introduction of which I have the honour to move, is framed with this two-fold object. By Act II of 1872, section 15, it was enacted that all existing public fire-engines, or stables or buildings thereto belonging, except those belonging to the Military Department, or to the Port Commissioners, constituted under Act V of 1870, should be transferred to the fire-brigade, which, by that section, the Justices were to organise and thereafter to maintain. By Act V of 1870, the Commissioner of Police was, under section 17, directed to take charge of the existing fire-brigade with all buildings, animals, &c., thereto belonging. In Act IV of 1883, there is nothing to be found as to the vesting of the proprietary right of the properties belonging to the fire-brigade, or as to the Commissioner of Police having control of the brigade. That is how the law stands at present.

"The practical results to be obtained by the proposed section are that if passed there cannot be at any time any question as to the persons in whom there is vested property in the fire-brigade, and that if it should be thought desirable to sell any site or to secure other sites in more convenient localities, the disposal and acquisition of such sites will be more readily effected. The existing sites and appurtenances have been acquired for the benefit of the fire-brigade in former years by means of the heavy license fees imposed on the jute industry. After the passing of this Bill, the burden will be divided, and the public will, in the shape of general taxation, have with the industries taxed to pay for those sites and equipments. It appears therefore, Sir, but just that the property and funds belonging to the fire-brigade should be vested in the Municipal Commissioners. It seems to me also just that while vesting the Commissioners with the proprietary right in these matters, they should be subject, as they practically have been during a considerable period of time, to the absolute control of the Commissioner of Police. It is not my intention to interfere with that control; nor do I think it could, under the language of this section, be contended that the Municipal Commissioners could interfere with or disturb that control. The proposed section merely provides for vesting in the Commissioners the Fire-brigade Fund, the fire-engines, fire-escapes, horses, accoutrements, and other equipments and appurtenances of the fire-brigade, and all stations, buildings and places heretofore acquired, provided or built out of any fund appropriated to the maintenance of the fire-brigade under Act IV of 1883."

The Hon'ble MR. COTTON said:—"I regret, Sir, that I should find it my duty to oppose this amendment. It appears to me that there are only two principles before this Council in respect of the executive management of the fire-brigade. Either the fire-brigade must be managed as it is in other countries by the local body concerned, that is to say, in the case of Calcutta by the Calcutta Corporation, or it must be managed by an executive officer appointed for the purpose, as it has been the practice in Calcutta by the Commissioner of Police.

When first the fire-brigade was established in Calcutta, the responsibility of its administration rested with the Justices of Calcutta. The fire-brigade in those days was managed in a very simple manner; but when, in consequence of the large conflagrations in jute warehouses, it was found necessary to increase the fire-brigade, the Justices found themselves unable to administer it efficiently, and they requested the Commissioner of Police to take over charge. This he did, and the arrangement which was come to in 1872 was ratified by the Legislature in 1879, and that arrangement has remained in force ever since. The reason for the arrangement was that the Commissioner of Police, with the large staff at his disposal, is able to administer and control the brigade more efficiently and certainly very much more cheaply than the Calcutta Corporation would be able to do. He is able to administor the brigade thoroughly and efficiently at a cost of something more than Rs. 50,000 a year. There can be no doubt, I think, that if the control were transferred from the Commissioner of Police to the Corporation, the expenditure would be trebled. In Bombay, where the Corporation is responsible for the administration, the cost of maintaining the fire-brigade is about Rs. 1,50,000 a year. It was primarily in order to avoid this large expenditure that the Legislature decided that the arrangement for managing the fire-brigade through the Commissioner of Police should continue, and, as far as I am aware, the Municipal Commissioners of Calcutta have not objected to this arrangement. It is no doubt inconsistent with the general doctrine that those who provide the funds should be responsible for the administration. That is a sound and healthy rule, but it is liable, like all other general rules, to exceptions. The reason for the exception in this case is that the fire-brigade can be managed very much more cheaply by the Commissioner of Police.

"The amendment proposed by the learned Advocate-General recognizes the control of the Commissioner of Police, but it vests the whole property of the fire-brigade in the hands of the Municipal Commissioners; and it seems to me that by so doing it introduces an element of friction and disturbance. Under the Bill as it now stands, the Commissioners of Calcutta will have nothing whatever to do with the fire-brigade or with the licensing of warehouses, except the collecting of the funds necessary for the purpose of maintaining the brigade. The powers hitherto exercised by the Calcutta Corporation have been materially diminished by the provisions of the Bill. It is, as hon'ble members are aware, a sore point with the representatives of the Municipality in this Council that it should be so. But of this I am sure that, if the amendment now proposed by the learned Advocate-General is passed, the sore which already exists will be constantly kept alive. This amendment will act as a perpetual blister which will serve to perpetuate the friction, which possibly, if left alone, may die out. It is inconceivable that the Municipal Commissioners, having the whole property of the brigade vested in them, should not take action under the power which the law gives them. I cannot say what direction that action might take, but there can be little doubt, I imagine, that it would result in interfering with the absolute discretion which the law at present leaves in the hands of the Commissioner of Police in administering the affairs of the brigade. If their interference should not tend in that direction, I cannot say in what direction it would operate; and I, for one, would very greatly regret if we allow a provision to be inserted in this Bill which is likely to produce so dangerous and troublesome an effect.

"There is one other very practical objection to the learned Advocate-General's amendment, and that is, that it is not the Commissioners of Calcutta alone who are interested in the working of this Bill. It is not in the Commissioners of Calcutta alone that the property of the fire-brigade will be vested, if this amendment is passed. But it is in all the Commissioners of the neighbouring municipalities as well as the Commissioners of Calcutta, and it will be absolutely impossible to define what property is vested in the hands of the Commissioners of Calcutta, what property is vested in the hands of the Municipal Commissioners of Howrah, or in those of the Commissioners of Cossipore or Chitpore, or of the South Suburban town. In those outlying municipalities, fire-brigade stations have generally been constructed. The head-quarters of the brigade are in Calcutta itself, and all the property of the brigade, fire-escapes, horses, accoutrements, equipments, and what not, which are now stationed in Lall Bazar, will, if this section be passed, be vested equally or proportionately, I cannot say what the learned Advocate-General's intention is in this respect, not only in the Calcutta Commissioners, but in those of the Commissioners of the municipalities to which this Act is extended. This is a very practical difficulty against the acceptance of the amendment proposed. I object to it, Sir, both on the ground of the extreme friction which a clause of this nature will be calculated to excite, and I object to it also on the ground of its extreme practical inconvenience."

The Hon'ble MR. LAMBERT said:—"I think that this Council will consider that the motion brought forward by the learned Advocate-General ought to be based either on what is equitable, or what is expedient, if not on both. Now, is the proposal an equitable one? At an earlier stage in the debate, the learned Advocate-General insisted with much emphasis that the municipalities had without any kind of justification benefited largely from the Fire-brigade Fund. The amount appropriated for general improvements was said to amount to upwards of a lakh of rupees. The property of the fire-brigade may, at the present time, be estimated at something like two lakhs of rupees, and why this valuable property should now be made over as a free gift to the municipalities, simply because it is proposed to impose on those bodies a portion of the cost, I am at a loss to understand. The property has been paid for wholly by the owners of jute warehouses. If, therefore, the Hon'ble Mr. Playfair were to make any claim on behalf of the owners of warehouses, the proposal would be intelligible. But, Sir, as the matter stands, the Council will, I think, fail to see where the equity of the motion comes in.

"Nor is it expedient? The proposal to vest the control of the brigade in the Commissioner of Police is not a new one. This method of control was decided on twenty years ago, as soon as ever it was found necessary to maintain a brigade at all; and this method was decided for two reasons: economy and efficiency. Now, it is not proposed to disturb this arrangement. The control of the brigade is still to be vested in the Commissioner of Police, but the property of the brigade is to be vested in the Commissioners. I ask whether anyone in this Council Chamber would, in an important matter like this, willingly accept control so fettered? The property of the brigade is declared to belong to certain bodies, but the Commissioner of Police is to control it. And the Hon'ble Member in charge of the Bill has explained that there is not one single municipality, but several municipalities. We already know of four. All these are separate bodies. How then is the property of the brigade to be apportioned amongst them? At the head station there are four steam-engines, and most of the plant and horses; at Howrah there is one engine; at Chitpore-Cossipore, one; at Manicktollah, none. Is Calcutta to take all that is at Lall Bazar?; and is Howrah to take what is at Howrah?, and so on. But, even if this were so settled, the property of the municipalities would be constantly on the move—sometimes here, sometimes there. How is all this to be settled? Again, it may be necessary to condemn an engine or stores. How is this to be done? Is each municipality to be consulted; and supposing one of them objects, who is to decide? Sir, if this motion of the learned Advocate-General be carried, there is only one logical sequence. The control of the fire-brigade must be transferred to the municipalities. Let them manage their own property, but do not by your vote sanction what is neither equitable nor expedient, and which must lead to friction and inconvenience."

The Hon'ble MR. PLAYFAIR said:—"The statement has been accepted by members of this Council, that the jute industry founded the fire-brigade as it has been known since 1872, that that industry has been taxed so as to enlarge the resources of the brigade to an extent commensurate with the adequate protection of a metropolitan area not far short of 55 square miles, to provide pension funds and sums to improve the block property of the Corporation; yet it has never been stated to whom the property of the brigade belongs, or in whom it is vested. It is now, however, proposed that the valuable property represented by the brigade shall be made over to the town, that is, it shall be a new gift, as we have just heard, of two lakhs of rupees from the jute industry to the city, to the Corporation and citizens of Calcutta. Were the Government now to propose that, in consideration of this handsome donation, this real benefit, the jute industry should be relieved of fire-brigade taxation for, say, a period of five years, it would do nothing more than show a just concern for the interests of a community which, though small, has done a very great deal towards developing the prosperity of this City.

"The funds of the fire-brigade have been so freely utilized for other purposes that I gladly support any proposal that might in future confine the expenditure of these funds solely to the purposes of the brigade, and that would make some single body responsible for the equipment of the brigade. So long as particular industries continue to be assessed to special and differential taxation, I consider it most necessary that the expenditure of the contributions levied from them should be jealously watched. On the supposition that the amendment before the Council has this object in view, I give it my support."

The Hon'ble MR. WOODROFFE in reply said :—"This motion has been opposed by the Hon'ble Member in charge of the Bill on two grounds: first, he says it will operate as a perpetual blister, and, secondly, that it is impractical in its character; and he has alluded to there being some friction, as I understand him, between the Municipality and the Commissioner of Police. [The Hon'ble MR. COTTON :—"None at present."] How this provision can operate to cause friction of any kind which should be dreaded, I am unable to see. It was said by the hon'ble member that the fire-brigade has been managed, whilst under the control of the Commissioner of Police, in a most economical manner. I trust the hon'ble member will accept my assurance that I in no degree doubt that statement; nor is it any part of this amendment to alter the position of affairs as regards the control of the Commissioner of Police. So far, therefore, as the remarks of the Hon'ble Member in charge of the Bill are concerned, as regards economy and good management, I am at one with him. It is said that the Municipal Commissioners have not objected to the present state of things. What is the present state of things? I was in hopes that the Hon'ble Member in charge of the Bill would have favoured the Council with his opinion as to the persons in whom the property is vested at the present moment. That the Commissioners have not in times past insisted upon an express recognition of their proprietary right may well be, because in those days the general body of rate-payers did not contribute towards the cost of the fire-brigade. No doubt, in the time to come, when this Bill is passed into law and funds have to be provided by the general body of the rate-payers, we may expect that those rate-payers will be less supine in the consideration of their interests, and the safe-guarding of their property, than the Commissioners were when they did not tax the rate-payers at all. If everything is, as I have every reason to believe it to be, perfectly straight and perfectly satisfactory, then I have not such fear and dread of the rate-payers taking such action as the law allows. I think it very desirable that persons should take such action as the law allows them.

"I am not a believer in arbitrary power; my contention is that, whilst the Commissioner of Police should have complete control over the fire-brigade, the Municipal Commissioners should know what the property consists of, and that it should be treated in law as belonging to them. But my hon'ble friend suggested that there was a practical difficulty in the matter. The practical difficulty which suggested itself to him is, that the term used in the amendment is 'the Commissioners,' and that term is defined in the Bill, as he rightly points out, to include not merely the Commissioners of Calcutta, but also the Commissioners of the various suburban municipalities. The term was used by me of set purpose, in order to avoid the difficulty which the hon'ble member seemed to find. It is not my intention, and I do not think the proposed section can be read so as to vest in the Calcutta Corporation portions of the property, and in the Commissioners of Howrah, Cossipore, &c., other portions. For the purposes of this Act, the whole of those Commissioners have the property vested in them; and therefore the section will prevent the occurrence of that which has been described as a blister and as a friction. It will not in any way enable the Corporation to come in and make an objection to a particular mode of dealing with that portion of the fire-brigade property which is within its limits. Far from it. The property would be vested in the whole of the municipalities concerned, and there would therefore be no ground for the Calcutta Commissioners laying claim to the property in Lall Bazar, or any other particular property. It has been admitted by the Hon'ble Member in charge of the Bill that the general rule is, that to those who pay belong what they pay for. That I understand is the highest principle of law, and it will be found that there is nothing in this section to prevent there being a perfect safeguard in maintaining the complete control over the property of the fire-brigade being in the hands of the Commissioner of Police."

The Hon'ble THE PRESIDENT said:—"I am sure the Council will feel some hesitation in differing from the learned Advocate-General on an amendment which has been brought forward, on a matter which is mainly one of legal scope. I came down to this meeting without having formed any definite view as to what the meaning and effect of this amendment, if carried into law, would be, but I venture to say that the result of the discussion to my mind has been to create the opinion that it would be unwise and dangerous to pass this amendment. It is admitted that, under the present law, which has been in force since 1883, the property of the fire-brigade is not legally vested in any one. This may be technically an anomaly, but I think we should require of any one who wishes to remove that anomaly that he should show that inconvenience has arisen from it hitherto. Apparently, so far as I have understood the debate, no such inconvenience has been felt. If therefore we are to remove an anomaly, from which no inconvenience has arisen, we ought to do it by legislation, the results of which are clear and patent to all.

"It seems to me that the amendment which has been proposed might produce results which are not anticipated, and, at any rate, that there is considerable difference of opinion in the minds of hon'ble members as to what those would be. As far as I understand the question, the advantages which the Advocate-General has referred to as to be brought about by the passing of his amendment are already provided for in the law. The Commissioner of Police has to prepare an annual budget; that budget has to be laid before the Municipal Commissioners at a meeting and may be criticised and modified by them, such criticism and modification only taking effect, if ultimately they are approved by the Local Government. Again, at the close of the year, the Commissioner of Police has to present a report of the working and the expenditure of the fire-brigade, which is to be published in the Gazette. All information, therefore, which is needed by the public, who contribute by the payment of taxes towards the maintenance of the fire-brigade, will be conveyed to them under the provisions of the present law. But it seems to me that it might be a very dangerous thing if there is an obscure region in which the authority of the Commissioners and of the Commissioner of Police might possibly clash. I think we are justified in trusting to the good sense and moderation of both the Municipal Commissioners and the Commissioner of Police that there will be no clashing; but it would be unwise for the Legislature to introduce an amendment, the result of which would be to involve things in obscurity, and possibly clashing, which none of us desire and which can lead to no good result. I shall, therefore, vote against the amendment."

The Motion being put, the Council divided:—

Ayes 3.	Noes 10.

The Hon'ble Babu Gonesh Chunder Chunder.	The Hon'ble Maulvi Syed Fazl Imam, Khan Bahadur.

	The Hon'ble Mr. Lambert.
	The Hon'ble Mr. Risley.
	The Hon'ble Mr. Cotton.
	The Hon'ble Mr. Allen.
	His Honour the President.

So the Motion was negatived.

The Hon'ble MR. WALLIS moved that the following section be added after section 28 of the Bill:—

'The Fire-brigade Fund formed under this Act, and the fire-engines, fire-escapes, horses, accoutrements and other equipments and appurtenances of the fire-brigade, and all stations, buildings and places heretofore acquired, provided or built out of any fund appropriated to the maintenance of the fire-brigade under Act IV of 1883, or any of the Acts repealed thereby, or which shall hereafter be acquired, provided or built under the provisions of this Act, are hereby vested in the Commissioner of Police, subject to the control of the Local Government.'

He said:—"The amendment which stands in my name is identical with that which was brought forward by the learned Advocate-General, and which has just been lost, except that my proposal is, that the property of the brigade shall be vested in the Commissioner of Police, subject to the control of the Local Government, instead of in the Municipal Commissioners as suggested by the Hon'ble Mr. Woodroffe.

"It seems to me beyond question that the valuable property of the brigade should be vested in some responsible official, and no arguments are required to prove that the official most suited to be entrusted with this charge is the Commissioner of Police, as the Chief Executive Officer of the brigade, and under whose sole orders the fire-brigade is worked. Throughout the whole Bill this officer is recognized as the person to whom Government will look for the efficient working of the brigade, and it seems but reasonable that the property should be vested in him, thus making him legally responsible for everything appertaining to or belonging to the brigade. In the event of land being acquired for the purposes of the brigade, it would be vested in the Secretary of State. In the first place, the Commissioner of Police, under section 8, clause (1), is empowered to appoint the Inspector of Warehouses. Under section 24 the Municipal Commissioners have leave to pay to the Commissioner of Police the sums required to meet the cost of the brigade. Under section 27 it is the Commissioner of Police who has to frame the annual budget and to distinguish in the receipts of such budget the proportionate sums to be contributed by the several municipalities. Under section 31 the Commissioner of Police is deputed to maintain an efficient fire-brigade, and finally under section 42 the Commissioner of Police has to submit a report to the Local Government showing the constitution, assets and working of the fire-brigade during the year.

"It will be seen from the sections to which I have ventured to draw the attention of hon'ble members that this officer is in every way held responsible for the equipment and efficient working of the brigade. It is therefore nothing but right that, as the Commissioner of Police is thus made liable, nothing should be done which is likely to hamper his freedom of action, which would interfere with the economical working of the brigade or impair its efficiency.

"It must be remembered that an immense saving is effected by Government allowing the Commissioner of Police to act as chief of the brigade, and in permitting the subordinate members of the police force to assist in cases of emergency. I understand that no charge has been made at the head-quarters of the police for stabling, accommodation for fire-engines, vans, breaks, &c., godowns for stores or quarters for men, and this may be considered an ample return for any benefit the Police Funds may derive by using the horses belonging to the brigade. It must be remembered that the horses would, under any circumstances, have to be kept in exercise, and were it not for the use they get in the police vans, &c., special men would have to be kept for the purpose.

"I think I have said enough to show that, if the property is to be vested in any particular official, the Commissioner of Police is the one in whom it should be so vested.

"With these remarks I would move the amendment which stands in my name."

The Hon'ble MR. WOODROFFE said:—"Although it is very desirable that the property in question should be declared to be vested in some person, I confess there is some difficulty in enacting that such person should be the Commissioner of Police. The proposed section refers to the Commissioner of Police, whilst the hon'ble member suggests that the landed property will be vested in the Secretary of State, but the amendment which he has proposed vests it in the Commissioner of Police. There are, I think, very serious questions involved in the proposed new section which ought to be avoided, if possible."

The Hon'ble MR. ALLEN said:—"It appears to me that this amendment is decidedly of a very doubtful character, because the Commissioner of Police qua Commissioner of Police cannot hold property. In what capacity can he hold property? In England the Rector of a parish can hold property because under the English law he is a corporation sole, but the Commissioner of Police is not a corporation sole, Calcutta being ruled by English law. I speak with great hesitation in the presence of the Advocate-General, but apparently his view is almost identical with mine. Could the Commissioner of Police institute a civil suit? A large number of powers are conferred upon the Commissioner of Police, but they are exercised for the purposes of police. The property of the fire-brigade is mostly moveable property, and mere possession of that moveable property gives the possessor a right against wrong-doers. The mere fact of his having this property in his charge will entitle him to maintain a prosecution for theft. The property being mostly moveable property, there would appear to be no difficulty in protecting it under the ordinary law. But as to immovable property, the question is doubtful. That must vest in some body. I presume that all the immoveable property belonging to the Government and now occupied by the police is vested in the Secretary of State. I can see no difficulty in allowing the property which the police hold for fire-brigade purposes to be regarded as being also vested in the Secretary of State, and it appears to me, therefore, that it would be wiser not to press this very doubtful amendment."

The Hon'ble THE PRESIDENT said:—"I venture to suggest, after what has fallen from the legal advisers of this Council, to the effect that the passing of this amendment would be contrary to law, that the hon'ble mover will perhaps see fit to withdraw the amendment."

The Hon'ble MR. WALLIS, by leave of the Council, then withdrew the amendment.

The Hon'ble MR. WOODROFFE moved that, in section 46, the words "coir," "oil" and "ship-chandlery," wherever they occur, be omitted.

The Motion was put and agreed to.

The Hon'ble MR. COTTON moved that, for section 47, the following be substituted:—

'47. Sections three hundred and forty-seven of the Calcutta Municipal Consolidation Act, 1888, and two hundred and sixty-one of the Bengal Municipal Act, 1884, are hereby repealed, in so far as they entitle the Commissioners to levy fees in respect of premises licensed as depôts for hay, straw, wood, rags, jute or other dangerously inflammable material, which are licensed and used as warehouses under this Act.'

He said:—"The amendment which stands in my name is of a formal character only, and is intended to extend the repeal of the law, in so far as the imposition of a special tax on hay, straw, wood, &c., applies in the Municipality of Calcutta, to other municipalities to which the Fire-brigade Bill has been or may be extended. By an oversight the Select Committee repealed this section in respect of the Calcutta Municipality only. It escaped notice that a similar provision is contained in the Bengal Municipal Act, and that a similar repeal should therefore be enacted in respect of such articles of an eminently dangerous and inflammable character as are enumerated in the Bengal Municipal Act. The amendment before you makes the proposed repeal apply equally to the Calcutta Municipal Consolidation Act and to the Bengal Municipal Act of 1884, and the concluding words of the section repealing the existing law, in so far as it enables the Commissioners to levy fees, in respect of premises licensed as depôts for hay, straw, wood, rags, jute or other dangerously inflammable material which are licensed and used as warehouses under this Act, make it sufficiently clear that the repeal cannot extend to any other municipality than those to which this Act will apply, or may hereafter be extended. It is only under the Bill now before the Council that warehouses can be licensed and used under the Act. But if this point, in the opinion of my legal friends opposite, is not clear, I shall have no objection to a postponement, in order to reconsider the terms of the section and make it quite clear. I believe, however, that the amendment, as it stands, is not open to any such objection."

The Hon'ble MR. WOODROFFE said:—"I understand that the Hon'ble Member in charge of the Bill has asked for my opinion on this matter. In answer I have to say that I do not see any objection to the proposed amendment. I believe it was by an oversight that we did not take power under the Bill to deal with the mufassal municipalities in the same way as in the case of the Calcutta Municipality."

The Hon'ble THE PRESIDENT said:—"I may explain that the difficulty which, I believe, I suggested to the Hon'ble Member in charge of the Bill was, that it appeared to me that as the section in the Bill stands, it precludes taxation of depôts for hay, straw, &c., in all municipalities in Bengal, and not only in those municipalities to which the present Bill applies. This difficulty is, however, an unusual one, for the Hon'ble the Advocate-General agrees with the Hon'ble the Chief Secretary that the introduction of the final words in his amendment would confine it to those warehouses which are licensed under the Act; and this will apply it only to the municipalities of Howrah, Cossipore-Chitpore and Maniktollah, and will prevent its being applied to other municipalities."

The Motion was put and also agreed to.

The Hon'ble THE PRESIDENT said:—"We have now disposed of all the amendments which have been brought before the Council, and it is only necessary to hold one more meeting to pass the Bill as amended. It will now be printed and circulated in its revised form, and there will be a final opportunity for any verbal alterations which may be found to be required before it is passed into law at the next meeting of the Council. It will be convenient to allow more than one week for this purpose. The Council will, therefore, be adjourned for a fortnight."

The Council adjourned to Saturday, the 25th March, 1893.

RESETTLEMENT OF CERTAIN PRIVATE ESTATES AND GHATWALI TENURES IN THE SONTHAL PARGANAS.

REVENUE DEPARTMENT—LAND REVENUE.

Calcutta, the 14th March 1893.

RESOLUTION No. 1291.

READ—

A letter No. 1507R., dated 6th August 1892, from the Commissioner of Bhagalpur, with enclosures, reporting on the resettlement of certain private estates and ghatwali tenures in the Sonthal Parganas.

Letter from this Government to the Commissioner of Bhagalpur, No. 3632L.R., dated 21st October 1892, and his reply No. 2527R., dated 19th November 1892.

The Land Revenue paid by the estates in the Sonthal Parganas district is permanently settled, but the relations between the zamindars and raiyats are controlled by Government, and a settlement is made of the rents and rights of the raiyats under the provisions of Regulation III of 1872. The first settlement of rents in the Sonthal Parganas district was begun in that year, and was completed in November 1878 for terms of seven and ten years. During the years 1887 to 1889 applications were made to the Deputy Commissioner by certain zamindars and ghatwals for a revision of the settlement, on the grounds that the term had expired, that the measurements recorded had been very roughly made, and that, although there had been a considerable extension of cultivation since the previous settlement, no rents could be obtained for such land without a new settlement. Government at first directed that the applications should be granted under Regulation II of 1886, but it was finally decided to carry out the work under Regulation III of 1872, as supplemented by Regulation II of 1886. The objection that Regulation III of 1872 did not provide a sufficient guarantee for the recovery of the cost of the operations to be undertaken was met by the applicants depositing the costs in advance. During the progress of the operations rules were framed for the guidance of the Settlement Officer, under the provisions of the two Regulations. In Government notification, dated the 16th April 1889, rules under section 10 of Regulation III of 1872, and section 30 of Regulation II of 1886, relating to measurement, record of rights, and other matters, were prescribed; and in April 1891 the Lieutenant-Governor, after visiting Dumka, drew up, in consultation with the local officers, rules for the settlement of rents in supersession of rules which had been previously framed, but found to be unworkable.

Law and rules under which settlement has been made.

2. In the orders dated the 10th September, 16th November, and 12th December 1889, 34 estates and ghatwali tenures which lie scattered in the Dumka, Deoghur, Jamtara, and Godda sub-divisions were notified for settlement under the two Regulations. In addition two villages—Sitakatain and Killa Bhadrain—which are not estates, were settled under Regulation II of 1886. A complete list of the areas settled, including the two villages last mentioned, is subjoined. The aggregate area has been found to be 463,432·32 acres, or 724·11 square miles, comprised in 1,432 villages:—

3. Mr. J. A. Craven, Deputy Magistrate and Deputy Collector, was appointed Settlement Officer. Field operations were begun on the 15th November 1888, Mr. Craven and the Assistant Settlement Officer, Babu Jogendro Chandra Bhanjo, each taking charge of one party. Three separate parties worked during the field season 1889-90—the first or Deoghur and Jamtara party under Mr. Craven's personal supervision; the second or Dumka party under the supervision of Babu Jogendra Chandra Bhanjo; and the third or Godda party under Babu Rash Behari Dutt, Second Assistant Settlement Officer. During the season 1890-91, the same number of parties were employed, but Mr. Craven was relieved of the charge of his party by Babu Balaram Das Gupta, the Special Kanungo, who was appointed Third Assistant Settlement Officer. The field work was completed in March 1891. In regard to settlement, the most important work was the determination of rents on the principles laid down by Sir Charles Elliott in the rules of April 1891, the chief heads of which are explained in paragraph 9 of the Commissioner's review. The record of rights drawn up at the last settlement having been found defective in some respects, it was also necessary that the Settlement Officer should prepare, under the rules of April 1889, a fresh record of rights for every village under settlement. This part of the work was done in a very complete and thorough fashion, and included many miscellaneous proceedings of a varied character, some of which are referred to below. The unit of settlement was, as before, the village, and not the estate. The publication, under section 24 of Regulation III of 1872, of copies of the khatian-jamabandis, and of the record of rights, was completed by the 15th February 1892. For almost the whole period covered by the proceedings, Mr. Craven worked under the supervision and control of Mr. Carstairs, the present Deputy Commissioner, and his final report was submitted on the 1st July 1892.

5. The 1,432 villages which have been surveyed and measured cover an area of 212,610·82 acres rent-paying and 250,821·5 acres non-rent-paying lands. Of the rent-paying area 211,310·12 acres are cultivated, and 1,300·7 acres uncultivated. Of the non-rent-paying area 1,923·5 acres are cultivated, and 248,898 acres uncultivated. The total cultivated area is thus 213,233·62 acres, and the total uncultivated area 250,198·7 acres. The proportions of the total cultivated and uncultivated areas to the whole area are 46 and 54 per cent. respectively. The average rent of cultivated land is Re. 1-1 per acre.

Particulars of lands.

Proceedings were taken under section 15 of Regulation III of 1872 in 48 villages for the exclusion of excess forest and waste. These excluded areas have been mapped and measured, and pucka boundary pillars have been erected. Proceedings were drawn up for every village headship, as also for every village settled khas. Rules regulating the rights of raiyats in regard to the village forest and jungle have been laid down, with a view to the permanent preservation of the village fuel and the timber supply. The village pasture lands, on which all raiyats are allowed to pasture their cattle, have been separately measured and defined, and the same has been done as regards the village common lands.

6. The total number of raiyati holdings is 36,733, and the average area per holding is 6·03 acres. The total number of sub-tenants is 8,941, and the average area of each sub-holding is 1·19 acres. The total number of headmen's private jotes amounts to 1,249, and the average area of each such jote is 24·97 acres. There are 659 official jotes held by headmen, their average area being 5·14 acres.

Rent.

8. The area under cultivation at the last settlement was 126,158 acres according to a doubtful estimate. The cultivated area now measured is, as above noted, 213,233·62 acres, giving an increase of 87,075·62 acres or 69 per cent. The rent has increased from Rs. 1,60,088-11 to Rs. 2,27,192-8, showing an increase of Rs. 67,103-13, or 41·9 per cent., equivalent to 45·6 per cent. of the cost of survey and settlement. The increase in the rent is therefore less than the increase in the cultivated area, and the rate per cultivated area has fallen (if the estimate of the former cultivated area may be accepted) from Re. 1-4 to Re. 1-1. The proprietors have thus secured, at a comparatively small outlay, (a) a considerable enhancement to their rentals, and (b) in the place of only rough approximations to the cultivated areas of the last settlement, an accurate and authoritative record of both cultivated and uncultivated areas in their estates. Of the total increased rental, Rs. 3,924 will not, according to Rule 6 of the Government Rules of April 1891, take effect until after the expiration of five years; this amount representing the aggregate excess increase over Rs. 100 per cent in the rents of individual raiyats. In other cases the new rents took effect from the beginning of the Bengali year 1299.

Headmen.

9. The headman, manjhi, mustajir, or pradhan is elected by the villagers when the office falls vacant, either by reason of his dying without a male heir, or being removed for misconduct. He is the head of the village police, and can be removed only by the Deputy Commissioner. He collects the rents from the raiyats except in the villages under khas zamindari management, where the rents are collected by the zamindar's amla. He receives a commission on his collections amounting to 6¼ per cent., or one anna per rupee, from the raiyats, and an equal sum from the zamindar, his nij-jote lands being assessed like other lands of the village. He is allowed to reclaim and cultivate the waste lands in the village without paying rent, or to settle such lands at half-rates with the other raiyats, the other half being appropriated by him; and he has the option of holding in his own possession or settling with other non-resident raiyats the jotes of absconded raiyats or of those who have died without heirs. His jote therefore consists of his private lands and the land which he acquires by virtue of his office. The latter constitutes his official jote. The headman's private and official jotes have been separately recorded in the record of rights; and the lands reclaimed by the headman during his term of office have been recorded as part of his private jote. The office of headman is not saleable, the only exceptions to this rule being the cases of (1) the memorialists to whom certain concessions were granted in Government order No. 1617, dated 7th June 1877, and (2) those settlement holders who were recorded as múl raiyats at the former settlement. The right of alienation in those cases does not include the right of splitting up the headship.

Raiyats.

No raiyat can be evicted except by the order of the Deputy Commissioner, who sanctions eviction only on the ground of non-payment of rent. Only money rents have been settled at certain recorded rates, which are also applicable to under-raiyats. The raiyati jotes are heritable, but not transferable.

Cost.

10. The cost of the operations amounted to Rs. 1,47,158-11-9, which have been paid by the proprietors of the estates under settlement. The average cost is therefore about 5·1 annas per acre on the total area of cultivated and uncultivated lands. The expenditure includes the cost of—

	Rs.	A.	P.
Tents	2,880	7	3
Furniture	698	8	0
Instruments	2,135	3	0
	5,714	2	3

The Lieutenant-Governor approves the Commissioner's suggestion that the tents, furniture, and instruments be kept for future use. They will be valued and paid for from the funds deposited for the settlement, the amount of the valuation being then refunded to the proprietors of the estates now resettled in proportion to their contributions.

11. A Notification under section 5 of Regulation III of 1872, declaring that this settlement has been completed, will be published in the Calcutta Gazette of the 15th March 1893, the publication of the records of rights under section 24 having been completed, as stated before, on the 15th February 1892.

Economic information.

12. The Lieutenant-Governor has read with pleasure the interesting economic information contained in the report of the Settlement Officer, relating to the distribution of the area among different classes of cultivators; the system of agriculture, wages, food, dress; the areas of the several classes of land; the proportionate increase in each since the last settlement, and the principal products with the areas covered by each. The total areas of rice and bari lands (i.e., lands on which crops other than rice are grown) at present under cultivation are as follows:—

	Acres.
Rice	106,732·41
Bari	106,501·21

Representing the whole tract under settlement by 100, the proportions borne by the rice lands and the bari lands to the whole area are respectively 23 and 22·9 per cent. The proportion of the areas covered by the several kinds of crops is shown below:—

Rice.	Indian-corn.	Sugarcane.	Wheat.	Oil seeds.	Pulses.	Cotton.	Indigo.	Total.
59·05	10·3	2·7	2·23	7·33	24·09	2·4	0·6	100

Irrigation.

Bandhs or embankments thrown across the jores or narrow streamlets, so as to form reservoirs, are the chief means of irrigation in this district, and are constructed by the Sonthals without any assistance from the zamindars. The total area covered by bandhs and tanks is as follows:—

	Acres.
In the estates in Deoghur	1,962·7
Ditto in Jamtara	1,690·6
Ditto in Dumka	1,495·1
Ditto in Godda	983·7
Total ...	6,132·1

Or 9·5 square miles.

Mr. Craven estimates that the area now protected by irrigation from all sources taken together amounts to about 34,748 acres, and that the proportion borne by the present irrigated area to the whole cultivated area is about a sixth.

Condition of Diku and Sonthal raiyats.

The ordinary Diku or non-Sonthal cultivator is fairly well off. The Sonthal is thriftless and fond of drink. He is consequently always in debt and in difficulties with his mahajan.

Maintenance of settlement records.

13. Rules for the maintenance of the settlement records were sanctioned in Government order No. 3254L.R., dated 27th August 1892.

14. The Lieutenant-Governor desires that his acknowledgments may be conveyed to Mr. Craven for the careful and thorough manner in which this survey and settlement have been carried out, and to Mr. Carstairs for his efficient supervision of the work.

ORDER.—Ordered that this Resolution be published in the Calcutta Gazette, and that a copy be forwarded for the information of the Commissioner of Bhagalpur.

SUMMARY OF THE METEOROLOGICAL AND RAINFALL OBSERVATIONS TAKEN IN BENGAL, AND OF THE METEOROLOGICAL OBSERVATIONS TAKEN IN ASSAM, FOR THE MONTH OF FEBRUARY 1893.

THE important features in the meteorology of February in Bengal and Assam have been :—

1. The mean pressure for the month has been in very distinct excess of the normal over the whole area, except perhaps at Darjeeling. The excess has usually equalled from 0·02″ to 0·04″, and it has been largest at the central and north-western stations, and smallest at the southern and eastern stations. At Sibsagar, Chittagong and Gopalpur, indeed pressure has been almost normal.

2. Temperature has been most abnormally low almost throughout the month, the general defect for the whole of Bengal equalling 4·1°, while in Assam it has equalled 2·7°. This defect has been most largely developed in the day or maximum temperatures, which at such stations as Berhampore, Burdwan, Krishnagarh, Naya Dumka, Purnea, Ranchi, etc., have been from 8° to 10° below the normal; while, on the other hand, at a few stations the night or minimum temperatures have been in slight excess of the normal.

3. Humidity has been in large excess of the normal at all except a few of the south-western stations, the variation in some cases exceeding 20 per cent. Cloud proportion for the month has also been very largely in excess of the normal, the amount of cloud in many cases being about twice as great as is usual in February.

4. Winds have been north-westerly and northerly for the greater part of the month, and have hence been rather unusual, for during February southerly winds usually commence at the southern stations, but this has not been the case in the present year.

5. Weather has been of a most unusual character from the large number of barometric depressions and disturbances which have advanced from North-Western India through the province and which have also been of a very influential character. Thus one depression appeared in North-Western India on February 4th, and passed through Bengal from the 7th to the 9th, giving very unsettled weather. Another storm or disturbance advanced from North-Western India on the 12th, reaching and affecting Bengal from the 13th to the 15th. Another depression advanced from Central India on the 16th, and affected Bengal from the 17th to the 20th, and a fourth disturbance coming from North-Western India on the 21st, caused disturbed weather and rain in Bengal from the 23rd to the 25th. Hence for a large part of the month weather was quite unusual with rather heavily-clouded skies and rain, and indeed almost the reverse of the ordinary north-east monsoon weather.

6. Owing to the large number and influential nature of the disturbances which have affected the province, rainfall in February has been very abundant, the falls averaging nearly five inches in South-West Bengal, about four inches in Chota Nagpur, about three inches in Orissa, East Bengal and South Bihar, about two inches in North Bengal, and an inch and-a-half in North Bihar. These amounts generally equal from three to six times as much as usual. The number of rainy days in February has also generally been about four times as great as in ordinary years.

Meteorology of the month.—The month of January in Bengal had been decidedly more disturbed than usual, and there had been no less than five periods of disturbed weather, owing to the passage of barometric depressions from North-Western India either towards or through Bengal. One of these depressions had passed through the province at the close of the month and had disappeared from about January the 30th, and from the 1st of February weather was again fine and settled in Bengal, and the usual cold wave had established itself in the rear of the depression. Thus from the commencement of the month the cold weather conditions were strongly established in Bengal, and these continued up till the 6th or 7th instant without material change. A barometric depression had, however, entered North-Western India on the 4th, and a secondary depression was developed over the North-West Himalayas, and both of these advanced steadily in an easterly direction towards Bengal. On the 7th the two depressions had apparently joined together, and a large shallow depression covered Bengal and the neighbouring parts of the Central Provinces, when the ordinary cold season conditions were reversed, the sky became overcast, temperature was in excess of the normal by from 1° to 4°, and rain became general over Bihar, North Bengal, Chota Nagpur, and South-West Bengal. On the 8th the depression had passed over the Bay, and was some little distance to the south of the Sundarbans, and hence weather over Bengal continued very disturbed, and general rain was reported over the whole province. On the 9th the depression had either passed on in an easterly direction over Burma, or had perhaps filled up: the wave of cold air following in the rear of the depression flowed over Bengal, and winds became northerly and north-westerly. Hence from the 10th instant the sky became cloudless and rainfall ceased. Temperature on the 10th became from 3° to 6° below the normal, while humidity was also low, and hence the cold season conditions again became strongly pronounced.

From this date up till the 13th, the meteorological changes of Bengal were again of little importance, but on the 12th another barometric depression appeared over North-Western and Western India, which travelled rapidly in an easterly direction, and on the 13th a shallow low pressure area existed over the Central Provinces and the west of Bengal, while a secondary depression had appeared over the Punjab. Conditions on the 13th, therefore, again changed in Bengal, temperature rose in front of the depression by 3° and 4,° the skies clouded over and rain commenced in the west and south of the province. On the 14th the depression had reached Orissa and the north-west of the Bay, where it was accompanied by a distinct cyclonic circulation of winds, and fairly general rain set in over almost the whole province. On the 15th the depression had apparently filled up or passed away in an easterly direction, and fine cool weather with little or no rain again set in for a day or two. On the 16th however, another shallow depression had formed over the central parts of India, and moving in an easterly or south-easterly direction it rather largely affected Bengal on the 17th instant, when it again produced fairly general rain in Bihar and North Bengal. On the 18th the low pressure area had again moved in an easterly and south-easterly direction, and was affecting the south-eastern parts of Bengal and Orissa, and fairly general rain was received in South-West, East and North Bengal and Chota Nagpur. On the 19th the depression continued to affect the weather in Bengal, but on the 20th it had apparently passed over the Bay, and from the 19th to the 20th weather was very disturbed in Bengal, and rain had again fallen at many stations, in several cases accompanied by local storms and sometimes with hail. On the 21st the area of low pressure in the Bay had disappeared, and weather again became fine in Bengal, the sky cleared, and temperature fell, while rainfall almost ceased. On this date, however, a fresh barometric depression entered North-Western India, advancing in an easterly direction, and on the 22nd one barometric depression was over the Central Provinces, while a second large depression existed over the Punjab. On the 23rd the depression from the Central Provinces had reached Orissa, that in the Punjab had passed into the Himalayas, and a new depression had advanced from the westward into North-Western India. Hence again conditions became very disturbed in Bengal, and on the 23rd heavy rain was reported at many stations. The depression was still over Orissa on the 24th, but on the 25th it began to move away in a south-easterly direction, and on the 26th it had apparently passed away into the Bay and had ceased to affect Bengal. Hence again from the 23rd to the 25th conditions continued in a very disturbed state, and fairly general rain was received up to the 26th. In the rear of the depression, as usual, a wave of very cool air advanced over the province from the 26th, the sky cleared rapidly, and rainfall ceased, while a steady dry north-westerly wind set in, which continued up to the close of the month, giving again very strongly pronounced cold weather conditions, which indeed were so marked that for the 24 hours from the 27th to the 28th of February, the mean temperature of the greater part of the province was from 10° to 12° below the normal.

Pressure.—At the beginning of the month the general pressure was nearly normal, and this continued to be the case up till about the 18th. For the week ending the 25th, however, the mean pressure had become very distinctly in excess of the normal, the excess equalling nearly 0·04″. For the last few days of the month, however, pressure became in rather large excess of the normal, the excess equalling from a tenth to nearly a sixth of an inch. Hence the mean pressure for the month has been very distinctly in excess of the normal, the excess usually ranging from 0·02″ to 0·04.″ Comparatively small excess pressures are shown in Orissa, South-East Bengal and Assam, and at Gopalpur, False Point, Chittagong, and Sibsagar the excess is not more than a hundredth of an inch. On the other hand, stations like Krishnagarh, Rampur Boalia, Bhagalpur, Arrah, and Chapra report excess pressures between 0·04″ and 0·05″.

Temperature.—The mean temperature of the province for the first week in February was 3·3° below the normal. The defect for the second week was also large, and equalled 2·8,° while in the third week it only averaged 1·8°. From this time till the end of the month the variation rapidly increased and became more than 4° in defect, and on the last day of the month the general temperature was about 10° to 11° below the normal of the day. Hence the mean temperature for the whole month has been largely in defect, and for the whole province the mean shows a temperature 4·1° lower than usual, while in South-West Bengal and Chota Nagpur the defects have averaged between 5° and 6°.

The following table shows generally the variation of the mean temperature from the normal, week by week, at nine typical stations in different divisions of the province, and from it the unusually large defect in the day or maximum temperatures will be seen, for in the week ending the 25th the day temperatures at most stations averaged about 10° below the normal:—

Rainfall.—The largest falls have been in South-West Bengal, which has received an average amount of about five inches, or nearly five times the normal fall for the month. In Chota Nagpur the fall has equalled about six inches, or six times as much as the normal. In East Bengal an average amount of three inches has been recorded, or about three times as much as usual. Orissa has also received nearly three inches, or three times as much as in normal years. South Bihar has received between two and-a-half and three inches, or again six times as large a fall as usual; while North Bengal has received a little more than two inches, or about four times as much as in normal years. The smallest fall of all has been in North Bihar with about an inch and-a-half, or rather less than four times the ordinary fall. The number of rainy days in February was also exceedingly large, and averaged between five and six days over the whole province, while the normal amount is one or two days only.

Notwithstanding the general abundance of the rainfall in February, the falls in the extreme south-east corner of the province have been scanty, and the falls in the Chittagong district have only averaged about half an inch, and have been less than the normal amount. Comparatively small falls were also received in Rangpur and Kuch Bihar.

The following table gives the summary of the temperature and rainfall data of each of the seven meteorological divisions of the province for the month of February 1893:—

The mean pressure, temperature, &c., are deduced from the traces of the Barograph and Thermograph and from observations made at 6h, 10h, 16h and 22h.

The maximum and minimum temperatures are obtained from self-registering thermometers. All the thermometers are verified, and the readings have been corrected to a standard constructed and verified at the Kew Observatory. They are exposed under a thatched shed open at the sides, and are suspended four feet above the ground.

The barometer readings are corrected approximately to those of the standard, Newman's No. 86, formerly at the Surveyor-General's Office.

The hygrometric elements are obtained from Tables III, IV, and V of the official tables computed in the Meteorological Office, and based on Regnault's modifications of August's formula.

The directions and the movement of the wind are taken from the trace of a Beckley's anemograph.

The mouth of the rain-gauge is one foot above the ground.

* Mean of 6 days.

Explanation.—Summary.—The normal means of air pressure and temperature are the arithmetical average or means of the reading during the same period. The humidity of the atmosphere is expressed at percentage, saturated air being presented by 100. A clear sky is denoted by 0 and an overcast sky by 01. rainfall the normal mean are the numerical means or average of the rainfall in that district determined from the returns sent in by the subdivisional station district, i.e. from total rainfall at the subdivisional stations in the district sending in returns divided by the number of stations. A rainy day is one or for the week ending Saturday, the 18th of March 1893.

Explanation.—... indicates that no rain has fallen. If the return for any day has not been received, the corresponding space is left blank. If any of the returns are wanting, the corresponding spaces in the total rainfall columns are left blank. With reference to the column of rainy days, the definition of a rainy day is when at least 0·1 inch of rain has fallen.

CALCUTTA, the 21st March 1893.

SUMMARY OF THE METEOROLOGICAL AND RAINFALL OBSERVATIONS TAKEN IN BENGAL FOR THE WEEK ENDING 8 A.M., SATURDAY, THE 18TH OF MARCH 1893.

TOWARDS the close of the previous week a rapid fall of pressure was occurring over Bengal, and the unusually high pressure which had existed for some little time previously was gradually disappearing; but even on the 11th, or the last day of the week, pressure was still in excess by a tenth to a seventh of an inch. On the 12th pressure had fallen over the whole province, the fall being brisk over the western half, but pressure was still usually in excess by considerable amounts, though the distribution was a little irregular. Winds also were irregular in direction, for north-westerly winds were blowing at some of the western stations, north-easterly winds in the centre of the province, while at the western stations the directions were so irregular that at neighbouring stations winds were frequently of opposite direction. Hence weather conditions were rather disturbed, and from the 12th to the 13th numerous rain showers occurred over the greater part of the province except in Bihar. On the 13th pressure had again fallen slowly over the whole province, so that it was still in excess of the normal, but again winds over the whole province were decidedly irregular, and the disturbed conditions made themselves felt in the numerous showers which occurred between the 13th and 14th, for on the morning of the 14th almost all stations in Orissa, South-West Bengal, North and East Bengal and Chota Nagpur reported rain. On the 14th also a further slow fall of pressure had taken place, and pressure became relatively low over a considerable part of Bengal. This was followed by a further fal on the 15th and 16th, when pressure became below the normal of the day at the western and southern stations, though it was still in excess over the remainder of the province. A rather brisk fall of the barometer again occurred on the 17th, which brought pressure below the normal by amounts ranging up to about a tenth of an inch in the west of the province, and also made the pressure decidedly lower in Bihar and Chota Nagpur than over the eastern half of the province. On the 18th again a moderate to rapid fall of pressure occurred, and pressure became below the normal of the day by amounts ranging up to 0·16″ at Dehri, while in the east of the province the defect only equalled about half this amount, and the actual pressures varied from 29·71″ at Ranchi and Dehri to 29·83″ at Chittagong. This distribution of pressure which obtained on the 18th instant, it will be seen, is that which characterises the hot season in Bengal. During these rather rapid changes in the distribution of pressure in Bengal conditions remained somewhat disturbed, and a few local showers occurred on almost all days up till the close of the week.

The main feature in the meteorological changes of the week has been the practical reversal of the pressure conditions which had previously obtained. At the end of the previous week and beginning of the week under review the pressure distribution was almost that of the cold weather, while at its close it was practically that of the hot season. Accompanying this change of conditions also there has been a steady increase in the temperature, and while on the first day of the week the mean temperature was from 6° to 8° and 9° below the normal, and while the defect continued large for the first five days, on the 18th, or the last day of the week, the general defect had been reduced to about 2° or 3°. The changes therefore of both pressure and temperature during the week have been large and important.

Pressure—Has been falling throughout the week, and was at its close rather largely in defect, but nevertheless the mean pressure for the whole period has been in excess at twenty-nine and in defect at eleven stations. As a rule the variations are not larger than from one to three-hundredths of an inch, and usually the defects are shown at the extreme north-western stations of the province, while the largest excess pressures are recorded at the north-eastern stations. The variations, however, at neighbouring stations are somewhat irregular

Temperature.—The changes of temperature during the week have been already alluded to. The mean for the period has again been largely below the normal value, and the defect equals no less than 5·4°. This defect has been largest at the western and south-western stations, and in the divisions of Chota Nagpur, South-West Bengal and Orissa it averages nearly 7°.

The distribution of temperature during the week and its variation from the normal value are best seen in the table below, where the average maximum, minimum and mean temperatures for the week at nine typical stations in different districts of the province are compared with the normal values for the period. The defect during the week again, it will be seen, has been most largely marked in the day or maximum temperatures, which at the majority of the stations given have been about 10° below the normal of the week:—

Rainfall—Has also been fairly frequent during the week, though the falls have usually not been heavy. Average falls of from three-quarters to one inch have occurred in Chota Nagpur and Orissa, and of about half to three-quarters of an inch in East, South-West and North Bengal. In Bihar, however, the falls have only averaged about a fifth of an inch. In all divisions except East Bengal the falls have been in considerable excess of the normal for the period. Indeed in Chota Nagpur the fall is seven times as much as usual, and in Orissa nearly four times as much, but in the other divisions the excess is not so large.

DRAFT REVISED WATER-RATE RULES FOR THE MIDNAPORE CANAL.

The 20th March 1893.

No. 75.—Notification.—In exercise of the powers conferred on him by sections 99 and 78 of Act III (B.C.) of 1876, the Hon'ble the Lieutenant-Governor proposes to make the following rules and to fix the undermentioned rates to be charged for water supplied from the Midnapore Canal. These rules and rates will supersede those now in force.

C. W. ODLING,
Secretary to the Govt. of Bengal.

1. The Divisional Canal Officer is responsible for maintaining the canal in an efficient state of repair, for providing drainage channels where necessary, and generally for all engineering work involved in its management, as well as for the distribution of water to lessees. The word "canal" is here used as defined in section 3 of the Act.

2. The Deputy Collector is responsible for the assessment and collection of water-rates accruing to Government from the canal.

3. Water shall not be distributed otherwise than on the application of a lessee, or to a person in whose favour a provisional license under rule 15 has been issued. Such application may be made verbally or in writing to any subordinate in charge of that part of the canal from which water is required.

4. If any lessee apply for water to the Deputy Collector or one of his subordinates verbally, he shall be directed to address himself to an irrigation officer or subordinate. If he makes such an application in writing, his petition shall be forwarded direct by the zilladar, to whom it is addressed, to the Sub-divisional Canal Officer in charge of that part of the canal from which the petitioner's village is supplied.

5. The Divisional Canal Officer shall map out the irrigable area into blocks in accordance with the natural features of the ground, and so determine that the whole block shall be irrigable from one outlet, or from one set of outlets. So far as may be practicable, the blocks shall be separated by drainage lines.

6. Each block determined as above shall be numbered and recorded with its irrigable area in registers to be maintained by the Divisional Canal Officers and Deputy Collector. The blocks shall also be marked on maps to be maintained by the same officers.

7. Leases for not more than five years may be granted for the whole irrigable area of a block, or, subject to the provisions of Rule 13, for definite parts of a block, under the following conditions:—

I.—Ordinarily the whole irrigable area of any village, so far as situated within the block, must be included in the lease.

II.—All leases within one block shall be granted, so that they shall expire on the same date.

III.—In order to equalise the areas to be dealt with in each year, the date of expiry of the leases in each block shall be determined by the Divisional Canal Officer in consultation with the Deputy Collector, so that, as far as practicable, one-fifth of the total area usually irrigated may fall out of lease in each year

IV.—No permit shall be granted, when the supply of water must of necessity be delivered across an unleased area, unless a village-channel exists, which, in the opinion of the Sub-divisional Canal Officer, will deliver water without waste across the unleased area.

8. The rates to be charged for water supplied between June and November, whether by flow or lift, to lessees on application shall be—

For a term of five years—Re. 1-8 per acre for each season.

For one year or for water supplied on a provisional license for which a permit for a term of years is not subsequently issued, Rs. 3 per acre.

Provided that the leases, whether new or renewals, required for shorter terms than five years in order to develope the system of blocks as explained above, shall be charged Re. 1-8 per acre only. Otherwise, in addition to the rate of Re. 1-8 mentioned above, an extra rate of 12 annas per acre shall in the first year only be charged on leases for less than five and more than one year.

9. For the supply of water, when available, for winter crops, a rate of Rs. 2-8 per acre per season shall be charged.

10. For the unauthorized use of canal water a rate of Rs. 5 per acre, or such less rate as may be sanctioned by the Deputy Collector, shall be charged.

11. Application for water-leases under section 74 of the Act shall be presented to the zilladar of the division in which the applicant's land lies.

12. Every application for a water-lease shall contain the following particulars:—

1.—Name and residence of applicant.

2.—Name of pargana, mahal and village in which the land to be irrigated is situated.

3.—Total area for the irrigation of which the application is made and its boundaries, and if the lands to be irrigated lie in separate chaks, the name of each chak.

4.—Names of the raiyats whose lands are to be irrigated, and the quantity of land held by each.

5.—Name of the canal and number of distributary from which water is required.

6.—Signatures of the applicants.

13. A separate application must be presented for lands in each village, but tehsilalaida or other lands lying within the village boundary at the time of survey may be included.

14. Before a permit for a term of years is granted, the written consent of the Divisional Canal Officer shall be obtained, but permits for one year only and provisional licenses may be issued with the written assent of the Sub-divisional Canal Officer. The Deputy Collector shall on the day of issue forward a copy of all permits granted to the Divisional Canal Officer.

15. When a water-lease is granted, a kabuliyat shall be taken in a form approved by Government, and a "permit" shall be given to the lessee or lessees in a form similar to that prescribed in Schedule C of the Act. Pending the completion of a lease, the zilladar may issue a provisional license for the supply of water to an area covered by an application.

16. On the issue of a permit or provisional license, the zilladar shall forward to the Sub-divisional Canal Officer direct a requisition requesting him to supply water to the lessee on application. This requisition shall be kept by the Canal Officer till January 1st next following, and shall then be returned to the Deputy Collector. On the back should be noted the several dates on which the village was supplied with water. A fresh requisition shall be issued on or before June 1st, and returned on or before January 1st, each year, till the lease expires.

17. When it comes to the knowledge of the Sub-divisional Canal Officer that canal water has been taken without authority, he shall hold a local investigation and transmit the record thereof to the Deputy Collector. Separate proceedings shall be taken in the case of each village irrigated without authority.

18. On receipt of the record mentioned in Rule 17, and after hearing any objection which may be raised, the Deputy Collector shall determine whether water-rates can be legally charged, and if so, he shall proceed to assess, at the rate provided in rule 10, the land irrigated without authority.

19. The statements of the amounts demandable for water-rates leviable under the rules in force shall be prepared under the supervision and signature of the Deputy Collector in such form as shall from time to time be sanctioned by the Lieutenant-Governor. Persons charged under rule 10 or 18 shall be served, by post or otherwise, with a statement showing the amounts charged to enable them to lodge an appeal to the Collector under section 91 of the Act if they desire to do so.

20. Should it be proved, after due enquiry, that the supply of water given to any leased area is habitually wasted, or used for the irrigation of lands not under lease, it shall be competent for the Superintending Canal Officer, with the concurrence of the Collector, to direct that the lease shall be cancelled with effect from the 1st of June next following.

21. The rates for water supplied from June to November shall in each season fall due on the 1st January following, but the Deputy Collector may require one-half of the rates due on applications filed after the 1st of September to be paid in advance, and may refuse to issue a permit for more than one year. The rates for water supplied for winter crops shall fall due on the 1st April following.

22. Water-rates imposed under rule 10 or 18 shall fall due as soon as the assessment is made, and shall be realized at once.

23. The Superintending Canal Officer may, with the concurrence of the Collector, direct the Deputy Collector to –

I.—Cease to issue permits for the irrigation of lands in villages where there have been constant difficulties in realizing water-rates until all the arrears of water-rates due are paid up, and also, if specially so ordered, unless half the amount due under new applications is paid in advance. An order under this rule shall be in force for the time stated therein, which shall not exceed three years.

II.—Cancel any five years lease if on the 1st of June of any year water-rates to the extent of half the demand for one year are in arrears.

24. Remission of water-rates, either in whole or part, as the case may require, shall be granted by the Deputy Collector for—

I.—Errors in the assessment of rates.

II.—Injury to the crop on a leased area caused by deficient supply of water.

Provided a written application for remission has been made 15 days at least before the crop is cut.

In regard to applications under II, the written opinion of the Divisional Canal Officer shall be obtained and form part of the record of the case.

25. The Deputy Collector, with the written consent of the Divisional Canal Officer, may grant remissions of water-rates, either in whole or part, for injury to the crops on leased areas caused by excess of water due to deficient drainage.

26. The Deputy Collector may, with the written assent of the Divisional Canal Officer, commute rates charged under rules 10 and 18 to those chargeable for water supplied on application, provided that a lease either for a term of years or for the season has been subsequently executed for the lands in question.

27. Remissions on other grounds than the above require the sanction of Government.

28. In cases where sums due on account of water-rates cannot be collected owing to the death, bankruptcy, or absconding of the defaulter, the amount which is non-realizable may be written off as irrecoverable on the authority of the Collector.

29. Before awarding compensation under section 16 of the Act, or making a reference under section 17 of the Act, the Collector shall obtain the written opinion of the Superintending Canal Officer, and his written opinion shall form part of the record of the proceedings.

30. The Deputy Collector may distribute amongst village mookhyas, who give efficient assistance in collecting water-rates, and generally in his operations under Act III (B.C.) of 1876, a commission calculated in such manner as he may think fit, provided the total amount paid shall not exceed 6 pies in the rupee on the total water-rates collected during the year.

4. (a) supply warping and other necessary appliances;

19. No person shall open, or attempt to open or shut, any dock gate, sluice or valve, nor any swing-bridge without orders from a duly authorized servant of the Commissioners.

20. The gates of the Dock or Jetty premises shall be kept open at hours fixed by the Commissioners, and ingress and egress allowed as directed by the Dock or Jetty Superintendent.

21. No person, unless duly permitted by the Dock or Jetty Superintendent, shall take inside the Dock or Jetty premises carpenters' tools or other instruments for opening cases, and no cooper shall be allowed to work in the sheds without a license from the Dock or Jetty Superintendent.

22. Bells must not be struck to denote the hour on board ships in Dock.

23. No vicious or dangerous animals, and no loaded gun or other firearm, shall be kept on board any vessel in Dock or at the Jetties.

26. Fires of coal, charcoal, or coke may be used in the cabins, deck-houses, forecastles and cabooses of vessels in Dock, only between 5 o'clock A.M. and 9 o'clock P.M., subject to being prohibited (on any abuse) by the Dock Superintendent.

Fires for donkey engines, steam winches, and portable forges are also permitted during working hours and for ships' engines for a reasonable period before a ship leaves and after a vessel is berthed in the Dock.

All lights, whether oil-lamps or candles, used on board vessels in Dock, except as mentioned in the following paragraph, shall be in globes or secured lanterns.

Naked lights may be used only in the engines and boilers of vessels whilst under inspection and repair, or in duties connected therewith.

While any fire or light is lighted, at least one person on board is to be specially charged with the care thereof; and no fire or light is to be left or used in so rash, careless, or negligent a manner as to risk or endanger the safety of, or to ignite any goods, property, or vessel in the Dock or on the Dock premises.

All applications for special permission to use fires at any other than the prescribed hours shall be made in writing to the Dock Superintendent before 5 o'clock P.M., and shall specify the circumstances under which the request is made; if granted, the application, after having been endorsed by the Dock Superintendent, is to be retained on board by the person charged with the care of the fire, and is to be exhibited by him to the Dock and Police officials whenever demanded, and is to be returned to the Dock Superintendent by 10 A.M. on the following day.

32. From the time that the Dock ropes are made fast to the ship till she is secured on the blocks, all duty on board is to cease in order that the crew may be available to trim the vessel, if required, by the Dock Master.

33. As soon as a ship is in Dock, the Commanding Officer will station his men to hook on the tackles for putting the ship fair over the blocks, both forward and aft, and to assist in pulling up the shores.

34. As the safety of the ship depends on her prompt shoring, the most particular attention is requisite to the observance of the foregoing rule. No exertions of the Dock staff can effect this without the co-operation of the ship's crew.

35. Masters of vessels shall furnish special notice to the Commissioners before landing hazardous goods, e g., saltpetre, acids, sulphur, matches, spirits of wine, kerosine oil, turpentine, pitch, tar, and petroleum, &c.

47. When goods are to be landed or shipped inward or outward, authenticated challans, showing the descriptions and exact quantities of the goods shall be tendered to the cashier by applicants for the passes. On the data furnished in these challans the passes will be drawn up and the tolls levied. In the absence of such challans, or where reasonable doubts exist with regard to their genuineness or correctness, the calculation for levying the toll shall be based on the registered tonnage of the boats or vessels from which the goods are to be landed or on which they are to be shipped.

TRIAL BY JURY IN BENGAL

NOTIFICATION.

THE following papers are published for general information.

By order of the Lieutenant-Governor of Bengal,

H. J. S. COTTON,
Chief Secretary to the Govt. of Bengal.

The 28th March 1893.

Report of the Commission appointed to consider and report on certain questions connected with trial by jury in Bengal.

We, the undersigned, have been appointed by the Government of India by a Resolution, dated the 23rd February, 1893, as Commissioners,

(2) to consider and report whether any, and, if so, what modifications of the provisions of the Criminal Procedure Code relating to the trial of offences triable by jury before Courts of Session are desirable for the purpose of preventing miscarriage of justice.

2. We have read and considered the papers mentioned in the Resolution as well as papers placed at our disposal by the Government of Bengal and obtained from the High Court. These are specified in a Schedule attached to this Report. We have anxiously considered whether we should be materially assisted by the examination of witnesses, but, having regard to the ample information furnished by the large mass of official papers and statistics before us, supplemented by our own experience and knowledge of the subject, we have felt that the taking of oral evidence would not adequately compensate for the delay that it would necessarily entail.

3. Before proceeding to report the conclusions at which we have arrived, it is desirable that we should state briefly the origin and history of trial by jury in the Criminal Courts of Bengal outside the Presidency town of Calcutta, so as to show more clearly the grounds upon which our opinions have been formed.

i. Until the 1st of January 1862, when the Code of Criminal Procedure (Act XXV) of 1861 and the Indian Penal Code (Act XLV of 1860) came into operation, there was no regularly defined procedure in those Courts and the law administered, except where specially defined in regard to certain offences, was involved in some uncertainty.

ii. In 1793, Regulation IX was passed establishing certain Criminal Courts in Bengal under certain rules. Trials before the Courts of Session were held by an European Judge associated with a Mahomedan law officer, whose duty it was at the conclusion of the trial to deliver his futwa or exposition of the Mahomedan law applicable to the case. The law administered under the Mahomedan Criminal Code was modified from time to time in regard to certain offences by successive Regulations passed under the authority of Government to supply defects found to exist therein.

iii. Regulation VI of 1832 for the first time left it to the option of a Sessions Judge to dispense with the futwa of the Mahomedan law officer, and enabled a person under trial, who did not profess the Mahomedan faith, to claim exemption from trial under the Mahomedan Criminal Code, and in such a case the trial was to be held without the futwa of the law officer, and under one of three procedures described by that Regulation:

(a) The Sessions Judge might refer the case, or any point or points in it, to a Punchayet of respectable natives, who were empowered to carry on their inquiries "apart from the Court" and report to it the result, or

(b) The Sessions Judge might constitute two or more such persons assessors or members of the Court. These persons were required to give their opinions separately for discussion, and if any of the assessors or the Sessions Judge so desired it, the opinions of the assessors were to be recorded in writing on the proceedings, or

(c) The Sessions Judge might employ such persons "more nearly as a jury." It was left to the discretion of the presiding Judge to select the jurors, and to fix the number to be employed, and the manner in which their verdict was to be delivered. After consultation, a verdict was to be delivered; but it was provided that, in all cases, the decision was vested exclusively in the presiding Judge.

If the futwa of the law officer was, in a trial so held, dispensed with, and the crime of which the prisoner was convicted was one not specially provided for by the Regulations, the Sessions Judge was not competent to pass sentence, but was directed to refer the case for the consideration of the Nizamut Adawlut. Trial by jury, therefore, under this Regulation, was a very different matter from what the use of that term would ordinarily imply, and we may add that this mode of trial was very seldom adopted.

iv. In 1859, on the Report of the Indian Law Commissioners, the Bill to introduce a Code of Criminal Procedure came before the Legislative Council of India. The Report of the Select Committee was considered by the Secretary of State for India in Council who, on the 31st December 1859, communicated the following despatch on the subject of the introduction of trial by jury in the form and to the extent proposed in the Report of the Select Committee:—

"4. The Law Commissioners appointed under the Indian Act of 1853, proposed to retain the mode of trial by jury in the Presidency towns, and in the case of British subjects in the mofussil; to extend it to certain other classes in the mofussil who have not hitherto enjoyed it; and to leave it to the discretion of the Government to extend it to such other places out of the Presidency town as it may think fit. All other trials before the Sessions Courts were to be conducted with the aid of two or more assessors as members of the Court.

"5. In jury-trials the verdict of the jury was to be binding on the Court. In trials with the aid of assessors the decision was to be vested exclusively in the Judge.

"6. The course proposed by the Commissioners appears to Her Majesty's Government to have been a very safe and judicious one. Under a system intended to be ultimately adapted to the whole of India, including the Presidency towns, it was necessary to secure the binding nature of the verdict of a jury as to matters of fact. This was done, and the trial by jury was to be at once extended as far as it appeared to the Commission it could be safely done by a mere act of the legislature. Beyond this it was proposed to associate natives of the country as assessors with the Judge, in conducting criminal trials, and thus to prepare them for taking hereafter a more decided and efficient part in the administration of criminal justice than they now appear to be prepared for; and in such cases, the decision was to be left with the Judge in order to provide against failures of justice arising out of religious or other prejudices.

"7. The Code as prepared by the Commissioners was laid before the Legislative Council and referred to a Select Committee who struck out the provision respecting assessors thus providing for a general system of trial by jury.

"8. The members of the Select Committee, however, appear to have had their misgivings on this subject; and they accordingly inserted a clause to the effect that the Sudder Court should have the power of over-ruling the verdict of a jury because, said Mr. Harrington in the Legislative Council, 'there was a difficulty in making any other provision without giving a power to native jurors, with which, for the present at least, it was thought that they could not be safely entrusted.'

"9. The clause proposed by the Select Committee was struck out by the Council, and the Bill as now approved by them places the whole of the territories in India, in which the Codes of Bengal, Madras and Bombay, prevail, under a system of trial by jury, the unanimous verdict of the jury being final and conclusive in questions of fact.

"10. Her Majesty's Government are of opinion that the course recommended by the Law Commissioners should be followed, that trials in the Sessions Courts should be generally conducted with the aid of assessors, and that trial by jury being settled by law in regard to certain classes it should be left to the Government to extend it to localities as it may deem fit. Whatever objections there may be to such a course they appear to Her Majesty's Government to be far less than those which exist to the introduction of a general system of criminal administration for which the country is not prepared."

The Legislative Council accordingly modified their recommendations, and the Bill which became Act XXV of 1861, was passed, and came into operation on the 1st January, 1862. Under Section 322, the Local Government was empowered to order that the trial of all offences, or of any particular class of offences, by any Court of Session should be by jury in any district, and from time to time to revoke or alter such order. It was also empowered to direct that the jury in such trials should consist of five persons or of such number, being an uneven number, and not being less than five or more than nine, as it might direct in respect of any particular district or of any particular class of offences in that district. Accordingly the Government of Bengal fixed seven as the number of all juries in such trials, and also in the course of 1862 directed that trials should be held by jury in the Sessions Courts of the Districts of 24-Pergunnahs, Hooghly, Burdwan, Moorshedabad, Nuddea, Patna and Dacca in respect of offences under the following Chapters of the Indian Penal Code:—Chapter VIII (Offences against the Public Tranquillity); Chapter XI (False Evidence and Offences against Public Justice); Chapter XVI (Offences affecting the Human Body); Chapter XVII (Offences against Property); Chapter XVIII (Offences relating to Documents and to Trade or Property Marks); and also abetments of, or attempts to commit, any of those offences. Under Section 328, in order to constitute a legal verdict, the jurors were to be unanimous, or, if the jury consisted of five persons, a majority of four, if of seven, a majority of five, if of nine, a majority of six was necessary. In the event of a majority of a smaller number, the jury was to be discharged and a new trial was to take place, and if, on such new trial, a verdict by a legal majority was not obtained, the accused person was to be acquitted (Section 351). The verdict of the jury was final, except on a point of law, that is, on misdirection established on the part of the Sessions Judge.

v. The Code of Criminal Procedure came under revision by the Legislative Council in 1870, and, in introducing the Bill, the Hon'ble Mr. (now Sir) J. F. Stephen, on the 9th December, 1870, made the following observations:—

"The third and last alteration was with regard to trial by juries, the provisions regarding which appeared to be complicated. There were certain specified majorities which might convict a man of an offence; if a smaller majority wished to convict, the prisoner might be tried again. The Indian Law Commissioners observed that this was an extremely intricate way of proceeding, and that the concurrence of the Judge was a far better guarantee of the justness of the conviction than any specified majority of jurors; and the Bill was altered accordingly thus:—that if not less than two-thirds of the jury convicted a man, and if the Judge agreed with them, the accused was to be convicted; if there was not such a majority, or if the Judge did not agree with them, the accused would be acquitted."

Mr. Stephen then proceeded to state that according to his views trial by jury primâ facie was an institution unsuited to such a country as India, and he asked for information as to its working since 1862.

The reports of the local authorities consulted expressed a good deal of dissatisfaction with trial by jury in the seven districts of Bengal. The Select Committee of the Legislative Council, on consideration of those reports, in their preliminary report on the Bill thus dealt with the subject:—

Resolution III.—"We think that if the jury system in the Mofussil is to be maintained, the Judge should, in cases in which he differs from the jury, have power to refer the case to the High Court, and that the High Court should be empowered to pass final order in the case."

On the 30th January, 1872, the Honourable Mr. Stephen, in presenting the preliminary report, made the following observations:—

"The third Resolution had reference to a question which was referred to the Local Governments when this Bill was introduced; it was a question connected with the jury system in the mofussil. The jury system, as the Council were aware, was introduced by the Criminal Procedure Code passed in 1861. It was then felt to be an experiment, because the whole system of trial by jury implied the existence of a state of things which was peculiar to a community of Englishmen, or a people with English ideas, and if it did succeed, it would succeed in spite of difficulties peculiar to India. The committee had considerable doubts as to the course which ought to be taken in regard to the jury system in the mofussil, and whether it ought to be maintained at all. There was, however, one point upon which they felt clear. They thought that the Judge, in cases in which he differed from the jury, should have power to refer the case to the High Court, and that the High Court should be empowered to pass final orders. In trials by jury, a degree of finality attached to the verdict which attached to the decisions of no other tribunal in the country, and which was entirely opposed to the general spirit of the administration of justice in India. If a man was convicted before a Sessions Judge, he had an appeal to the High Court where they discussed the whole matter, and if they thought justice had not been done, they would reverse the decision. In England this could not be done, and the effect was that an irregular appeal to the Home Secretary was in practice allowed, by which the ends of justice were often defeated. Here if a jury convicted, their verdict was absolutely final; and the only remedy available when a man was unjustly convicted in that way was a petition to the Local Government or to the Governor General in Council, as the case might be, for the exercise of the prerogative of mercy. That was a power to which Mr. Stephen thought there was the very strongest possible objection, the administration of the law was one thing, and the exceptional setting aside of the law was quite a different thing. He admitted that there might be exceptional cases where, owing to peculiar circumstances, it would be proper for the Government to interfere to mitigate sentences which the Judge was bound to pass. But it appeared to Mr. Stephen altogether improper that a man should be permitted to say, 'the Judge thinks I am guilty, but I tell you that I am innocent.' Substantially that was an appeal; but it was an appeal to a person who ought not to accept the appeal; such questions ought to be left to the judicial authorities. The information before the Committee upon this subject, and the experience of the members of the Committee, led strongly to the conclusion that failures of justice resulted from this circumstance."

A further report was made by the Select Committee on this subject:—

Paragraph 9.—"As to Resolution III, we do not recommend the abolition of the jury system, but we think that the opinion of a majority of the jurors with the concurrence of the Judge should decide the case, and that, if a Judge differs from the verdict of the majority of the jury, he should have power to refer the case to the High Court, which may pass such order thereon as it thinks fit."

vi. On the 16th April, 1872, the Hon'ble Mr. Stephen, in presenting this report, accepted the suggestions of the Select Committee and made the following observations:—

"I am aware that some of my honourable colleagues think that we have changed the spirit of the whole system so much by these alterations, that it would have been better to sweep it away altogether. I cannot myself think so. I certainly should not have suggested the introduction of the jury system into India, if I had not found it here, and I cannot say that the opinions given of it by those who have had experience of its working are at all favourable. They were not, however, so altogether unfavourable as to induce us to take the step of recommending its total abolition. In giving the Judge power to refer to the High Court cases in which he differs from the jury, we have no doubt made a considerable alteration upon English precedents. But the alteration, if adopted, will be entirely in harmony with the whole spirit of Indian criminal procedure, the very essence of which is control and supervision by one set of Courts over another. We do not, of course, mean that the Judge should act in this manner in every case in which he has doubts as to the propriety of a verdict, or even in those cases in which he feels that, if he had been a juror, he would not have returned the same verdict. Our intention is, that he should exercise the power in question in those cases only in which it is necessary to do so in order to prevent a manifest failure of justice, and having regard to the strong motive which the Judge always has for avoiding all future trouble by accepting the view taken by a jury, I think there is little reason to fear that the power will be abused."

And the Lieutenant-Governor of Bengal, Sir George Campbell, said :—

"Another subject to which he would draw the attention of the Council was the difficult subject of juries. It was His Honor's opinion that, in this country, juries framed on an English model were not altogether beneficial instruments in the administration of criminal justice; at the same time he had not been willing to abandon the jury system altogether, because, although he did not think that trial by jury was an unmixed good, he believed that the system had a great effect on the political education of the people. It was a very great object to induce the natives of the country to take a part in self-government and in the administration of justice, and it was in that respect only that he regarded the maintenance of the jury system in criminal trials to be of some value."

vii. The Code of 1872 modified that of 1861 in respect of the finality of the verdict of a jury. Section 263 declared that—

"If the Sessions Court does not think it necessary to dissent from the verdict of a majority of the jurors, it shall give judgment accordingly . . . . . If the Court disagrees with the verdict of the jurors and considers it necessary for the ends of justice to do so, it may submit the case to the High Court, and may either remand the prisoner to custody, or admit him to bail. The High Court shall deal with the case so submitted as with an appeal, but it may convict the accused person on the facts, and if it does so, shall pass such sentence as might have been passed by the Court of Session."

viii. (An unimportant alteration in expression amounting to more accurate drafting was made in 1874, together with some other amendments in the Code which we need only mention in passing to the real matters in issue.)

ix. It will be observed that, while the Legislature enabled the Sessions Judge to suspend the verdict of a jury by submitting the case for the orders of the High Court, it permitted a verdict by a bare majority of the jurors, that is, by a majority of one juror. The Legislature apparently considered that if the Sessions Judge did not so disagree from the jurors, it was not necessary to have the absolute majority provided for by the Code of 1861. The orders of Government regarding the offences triable by jury, and the districts in which such trials were to be held, remained unaltered. The number of the jurors was in 1873, with the concurrence of the High Court, reduced from seven to five.

x. The Code of Criminal Procedure came again under discussion before the Legislative Council in 1881, and the system of trial by jury again became the subject of many reports, which were duly considered by that Council. But still, though those reports were not altogether favourable, no alteration was made in the Code of 1872 with the exception of a slight alteration of Section 263. Instead of the words quoted above, the corresponding Section (307) of the Code of 1882 provided—

"If in any such case the Sessions Judge disagrees with the verdict of the jurors or of a majority of the jurors, on all or any of the charges on which the accused has been tried, so completely that he considers it necessary for the ends of justice to submit the case to the High Court, he shall submit the case accordingly, recording the grounds of his opinion, and, when the verdict is one of acquittal, stating the offence which he considers to have been committed."

It was further provided that,

"in dealing with the case so submitted the High Court may exercise any of the powers which it may exercise on an appeal, but it may acquit or convict the accused of any of the offences of which the jury could have convicted him upon the charge framed and placed before it, and if it convicts him, may pass such sentence as might have been passed by the Court of Session."

xi. On 17th July 1884, the Government of Bengal asked the opinion of the High Court whether it was desirable to introduce trial by jury into certain other districts mentioned. After stating that the seven districts had been selected by the late Sudder Court on the ground that the intelligence of the residents was higher than that of the residents of other districts, and that the means of education existing in them, or in their immediate vicinity, would enable the better class to qualify themselves thoroughly to take part in the administration of justice, the letter from Government of Bengal proceeded in these terms :—

"3. The reports submitted by District Magistrates and Commissioners of Divisions on the working of the system during the first years of its introduction were not favourable. The Commissioner of Dacca stated that he had no confidence in the jury system so far as that division was concerned, and he was of opinion that justice would be defeated in the more important trials by its application to them, though it might work well in unimportant cases, where the parties were poor and insignificant. The Commissioner of the Presidency Division thought the country was not sufficiently advanced for the introduction of the system, as in his opinion, even the higher classes of the people, with the exception perhaps of those residing in the immediate vicinity of the metropolis, were unfit for the duty of jurors, not so much by reason of their education as on account of their peculiar religious tenets, and their more cherished feelings and prejudices; and where these objections did not exist, there was another not less important, viz., their ignorance of the first principles of the law of evidence. The Commissioner proposed that Judges should be vested with the power of selection and rejection, not of persons, but of classes, so that where there was reason to believe that a Brahmin might be, on religious grounds, acquitted solely through the religious scruples of Hindus, or a failure of justice might be apprehended from the existence of party feeling, the Judge might form a mixed jury of Mahomedans, Hindoos, and Eurasians or Europeans, so that no one religion or class should largely predominate. He considered that if this were done, and if greater care were taken in testing the qualifications of the persons selected to serve as jurors, and a clear summing up of the facts of the case were laid before the jury, the chief evils complained of would be remedied. The Commissioner of Burdwan, while prepared to see failures of justice in places where an unusual question arose or difference existed, was of opinion that the system was one of good promise, but that it ought to be gradually and discreetly introduced. The Commissioner of Patna concurred with the Magistrate of Patna in thinking that the natives of India were not, as a body, sufficiently enlightened, either morally or intellectually, to hold the important position of jurors, and he observed that the sooner trial by jury was abolished, in Patna at least, the better it would be for the administration of justice.

4. The reports of the Sessions Judges of the 24-Pergunnahs and Nuddea, copies of which were forwarded with the High Court's letter No. 3325, dated the 29th November, 1864, were more favourable to the system.

The Judge of Nuddea expressed his decided opinion that it had worked well, although there were a few cases in which the verdict of the jury had been directly against the evidence adduced. From his actual experience of the trials in his court, he was satisfied that the presence of a jury in criminal cases had been of essential assistance to himself, and was regarded by the natives themselves as a safeguard against errors of judgment and a guarantee that all the details in a case would be fully understood before any conclusion was formed; and he observed—"Whatever confidence a native may have in the strict and unswerving impartiality of the European Judge, I am not so satisfied that he ever places the same reliance in his power to comprehend all the intricate details which are involved in a difficult case where only natives are concerned, and it is just in these cases, specially where questions of caste, and questions involving family disputes, and native social life and manners, are constantly arising, that a jury taken from the body of the community and intimately acquainted with the ordinary transactions of native life are in the best position for giving most material assistance to the Court." The Judge of Nuddea therefore felt sure that the abolition of trial by jury would be a retrograde measure; and he added, "Every year I hope to see an improvement of what, in its present stage, can only be regarded as an experiment; and while no institution could be better devised for leading the people to think and act more independently for themselves, to rely less upon the opinions and assistance of others, and to trust more to their own energies and exertions, we shall find that the diffusion of the knowledge of the laws, in the practical administration of which they take so responsible a part, will produce a more intelligent attachment on the part of the natives to the Government under which they live."

The Judge of the 24-Pergunnahs considered the jury system to be unsuitable to the existing state of affairs, but he did not think it advisable to abolish it after so short a trial. He was in favour rather of retaining the system and of endeavouring to improve it by amending the jury list. He proposed having on every trial a mixed jury of Europeans and Eurasians with natives, and that the jury should be composed of 5 instead of 7 members.

The Hon'ble Judges of the High Court were of opinion that a certain measure of success had attended the introduction of the system, notwithstanding a few instances in which verdicts had been given palpably against the weight of the evidence, and from which, in consequence, a failure of justice had resulted. While, however, expressing generally their opinion that the system had not proved unsuccessful, the majority of the Hon'ble Judges were not prepared to advise its extension to other districts, or to crimes other than those specified in the chapters of the Penal Code to which it had been applied. They were of opinion that looking to the increased facilities of travelling both by land and water, the radius from within which jurors were drawn might be properly and advantageously extended to 15 or 20 miles instead of 10 miles, the distance from the court-house to which it was restricted, and that a reduction in the number of the jury from 7 to 5 would conduce not only to the convenience of the persons liable to serve as jurors, inasmuch as their services would be less frequently required, but also to the improvement of the system itself by the concentration of responsibility in a smaller number.

5. On a review of the reports summarised above, the Lieutenant-Governor (Sir Cecil Beadon) came to the conclusion that although there had been a few cases in which a failure of justice had resulted from the perversity, prejudice, or want of intelligence of the jury, yet the experiment had succeeded to an extent which was scarcely to be anticipated, and that, on the whole, the jurymen had discharged their duties intelligently and conscientiously. Sir Cecil Beadon was of opinion that in the face of the testimony to the beneficial working of the system in Nuddea borne by the Sessions Judge, who had evidently given the subject very serious thought, there was not sufficient ground for suspending trial by jury in that district, as had been proposed, and that, to abolish or suspend it in any district into which it had been introduced in respect to any particular class of offences to which it had been made applicable, wouldbe open to very serious objection. At the same time, there appeared to him to be sufficient grounds for not introducing the system into other districts until it had been tested for a longer period in the districts in which it was then in force. With a view to the improvement of the system, the radius of the area of selection was extended to 20 miles in the case of Krishnaghur, Patna, and Burdwan, and to 15 miles in the case of the sudder stations of the other jury districts, and the Commissioners were asked to have the jury lists carefully revised by Collectors and to see that the duty of a juror was made as little harassing as possible. The Lieutenant-Governor was of opinion that, in order to render the system applicable under all circumstances to the districts into which it had been, or into which it might hereafter be, introduced, provision should be made by law for empannelling a special jury whenever the Sessions Judge might think it necessary for the ends of justice to adopt this course; and also that the time had arrived when an attempt might be made to prevent access to the jury during the progress of the trial. He was not disposed to accept the recommendation of the High Court for reducing the number of the jury from 7 to 5.

6. In their report on the criminal administration of the Regulation Districts of Bengal for the year 1865, the High Court remarked that the jury system had worked well in the districts into which it has been introduced in 1862. They observed that its success must of course depend partly upon the proper selection of persons to form the jury list of a district, but mainly upon the ability and care with which the presiding Judge performed his duty of setting before the jury the evidence adduced, its legal value, and its bearing upon the crime of which the parties were charged, and they therefore strongly urged the importance of invariably selecting the most experienced and efficient officers at the disposal of the Government to serve as Judges in the jury districts.

7. In February 1867, Sir Cecil Beadon, before severing his connection with the Government of Bengal, recorded his deliberate and mature conviction, founded on long experience and observation, and specially on the results of the system in the Lower Provinces, so far as it had been acted upon, that the trial of all offences before the Courts of Session, in all parts of these Provinces, ought to be by jury; and that the system might be universally adopted not only without prejudice to the administration of criminal justice, but with decided benefit to the courts, and with increased confidence on the part of the public in their judgments. He observed that it had been his invariable aim to select the most efficient, and generally the most experienced, officers at his disposal, to serve as Judges in the jury districts, and that it might be in some degree owing to the care with which the selection of judges had been made that the system had been so entirely successful as far as it had been introduced. He added that, even if there were one or two Judges on the mofussil bench who were not fully competent to direct a jury, it seemed to him that this circumstance ought not to operate against the general introduction of a measure believed otherwise to be expedient. The Government of India coincided generally in the views expressed by Sir Cecil Beadon, but they were not in favour of the extension of the system suggested by him, as they preferred that its extension should depend in the main upon the assured capacity of the Judges available.

8. In their Registrar's letter No. 512, dated the 6th May, 1867, the High Court communicated their views on the following points in connection with the working of the jury system:—

(1) Whether the system should be extended to any districts besides those in which it was in force.

(2) Whether it should be extended to any other offences besides those to which it had been made applicable in certain districts.

(3) Whether any provision should be made for the empannelling of special juries.

(4) Whether it was desirable to frame rules for preventing access to juries during the progress of trials.

The High Court observed that they had had another year's experience of a system which was still new to the country, and that results had not been sufficiently encouraging to warrant them in recommending its extension either to new districts or to other classes of offences than those to which it had in some districts already been applied. With reference to the third point, the Court were of opinion that the preparation of special jury lists was undesirable by reason of the difficulty which was already experienced in keeping up the lists of persons qualified to act as common jurors in mofussil stations; and that any measure which was calculated to diminish the number of common jurors, or to lower the standard of intelligence required of them should be avoided in a country where the system was still upon its trial. As regards the fourth point, the Court were very decidedly opposed to the adoption of any such measure as the framing of rules for the seclusion of juries during the progress of trials. With the exception of the Commissioner of the Presidency Division, all the Commissioners of divisions, who were asked for their opinions on the points specified above, were opposed to the system of trial by jury.

9. The attention of the Government having been drawn to certain cases in which there had been a failure of justice, owing to the action of the juries which tried them, the Hon'ble Judges of the High Court were asked, in July 1871, for an expression of their opinion as to whether the system should be continued or not; and if not, whether it should be abolished or modified, and if modified, in what particulars. In reply, the High Court forwarded the opinions of nine of the most experienced Sessions Judges, seven of whom were opposed to the system, together with a minute by Mr. Justice Jackson, which was concurred in by the Judges of the English Committee. The High Court were not prepared to recommend the removal of any district where it prevailed from the operation of the system; and with regard to any change in the class of offences triable by jury, they stated their willingness to express their opinion upon it should circumstances arise indicating the need of change.

10. Mr. Justice Jackson was of opinion that in cases where popular superstitions, prejudices or predilections operated for or against the accused, it was very unlikely, or at best it was far from certain, that the verdict would be in accordance with the evidence. He observed that it was notorious that in some districts a jury would convict a man charged with dacoity on the slightest evidence, while in many cases it was extremely difficult to obtain a verdict of guilty in cases of perjury and even of forgery. Juries would often acquit, in the face of the clearest proof, rather than run the risk of conducing to a capital sentence, and more especially if the crime had arisen out of conjugal infidelity, and in some places it was next to impossible to obtain from Hindu jurors the conviction of a Brahmin. For these reasons, Mr. Justice Jackson strongly urged the necessity of amending the law in the direction of enabling the presiding Judge whenever he disapproved the verdict of the jury, to refer the case for final orders to the High Court. He also thought that the number of jurors (viz., seven) prescribed by Government was unnecessarily large, and should be reduced. With these modifications he considered that the system might be maintained, and that it was too late to withdraw entirely a boon which had been granted ten years previously, and which was capable of being continued if proper safe-guards were employed. These recommendations were substantially adopted in the Criminal Procedure Code of 1872. Under the Code of 1861 (sections 328 and 352) convictions and acquittals could be obtained only when there were certain fixed majorities in the jury. Under section 263 of the Code of 1872, a Sessions Judge was empowered to refer for the decision of the High Court any case in which he considered the verdict of the jury to be subversive of the ends of justice, and under section 236 the minimum number of the jury was reduced from five to three. No important changes in the system have been made in the Code of 1882; the only new provision being that in section 304, which empowers a jury to amend its verdict.

11. Without going so far as to pronounce the system of trial by jury to have been anything like a complete success, the Lieutenant-Governor thinks that it has worked fairly well in the more advanced districts to which it has been applied. Occasionally, no doubt, bad verdicts have been given by juries and miscarriages of justice have resulted; but since 1872, when, at the suggestion of Mr. Justice Jackson, the law was amended and a reference to the High Court allowed in cases in which the presiding Judge considered the verdict given to be wrong, these have decreased in number, and one of the faults of the system at present seems to be that Sessions Judges do not make use of the power thus conferred upon them as often as they should. It will be seen from paragraph 7 of this letter that Sir Cecil Beadon advocated the extension of the system to all the districts of the Lower Provinces so far back as 1867, when it had been in force for only five years. This proposal was apparently abandoned in deference to the view which had been expressed by the High Court that a longer trial should be given to the system in the districts into which it had been originally introduced. Upwards of 14 years have elapsed since Sir Cecil Beadon's Resolution of February 1867 was recorded, and Mr. Rivers Thompson thinks the time has now come when the matter might, with advantage, be reconsidered. I am accordingly to request that the Hon'ble Judges may be moved to favour him with an expression of their opinion as to the advisability of extending the system to the districts named in the margin, supposing that, in the opinion of the local officers who will at the same time be consulted by Government, it will be possible to prepare for these districts a sufficient jury list."

We have set out this letter at length because it embodies the deliberate opinion of the Local Government in 1884 on the working of the jury-system in the seven districts up to that time, and because the view expressed in it appears to be borne out by the papers before us relating to that period.

The High Court considered that the extension of the jury-system thus proposed was not desirable. The Judges (Mitter, Norris and Ghose, JJ., dissenting) reported against it in view of the following considerations:—

(1) The difficulty of procuring proper persons as jurors, regard being had to deficiency of education, using that term not only in its popular sense but in its widest acceptation.

(2) Superstition and prejudice which were still disturbing influences not unfrequently leading to failures of justice.

(3) Perversity, instances of which occasionally came to the notice of the Judges.

(4) Inability to grasp numerous details in complicated cases.

(5) Distaste for the duty shown by those whose services as jurors were specially desirable.

(6) The difficulty of providing a sufficient number of District Judges who were sufficiently experienced and qualified to preside at the trial of jury cases.

It will be observed that the opinion of the High Court was expressed only on the proposed extension of the system, and that neither the Government of Bengal nor the High Court contemplated any limitation of the system then existing, in respect either of districts or of the offences to which it had been applied since 1862.

xii. In 1890 the Government of India requested the Local Government and the Judges of the High Court to consider and report how the system of trial by jury had worked in the Lower Provinces; what opinion was entertained as to its merits as a means for the repression of crime; and what improvements, if any, were called for in its application.

As far as the High Court is concerned, it is sufficient to say that most of the Judges suggested amendments of the law calculated to secure a better administration of justice, and that none of the Judges suggested any other alteration in the system existing, except Mr. Justice Tottenham, who proposed the abolition of trial by jury in capital cases in the mofussil.

xiii. On 22nd June 1891 the Lieutenant-Governor of Bengal reported that a careful consideration of the opinions and figures obtained by him left no doubt in his mind of the failure of the jury system in these Provinces in its present shape. His Honour accordingly proposed to withdraw certain classes of offences which under the orders of 1862 and since that time had been triable by jury in certain districts, and also to extend that system to the trial of offences relating to marriage, and further recommended certain alterations in the law in respect of references by Sessions Judges in case of disagreement with the verdicts of juries, the ascertaining of the reasons for such verdicts, and the right of appeal on the facts where a jury was not unanimous and the Judge did not record his agreement with the majority.

xiv. The Government of India approved of the proposed withdrawal and addition of certain classes of offences; and accordingly on the 20th October 1892, the Government of Bengal excluded from trial by jury in the seven districts in which that system of trial had been introduced in 1862, offences under the following chapters of the Indian Penal Code, namely:—

Chapter VIII (offences against the public tranquillity).

Chapter XVII (offences affecting the human body), with the exception of sections 363 to 369 (kidnapping and abduction), section 372 (selling a minor for purposes of prostitution, etc.), section 373 (buying a minor for purposes of prostitution, etc.), and section 376 (rape).

Chapter XVIII (offences relating to documents and to trade or property marks).

The Lieutenant-Governor further directed that all offences under Chapter XX (offences relating to marriage) and abetments of, and attempts to commit, such offences should be tried by jury in any Court of Session established in the seven selected districts. These orders took effect from and after the 1st November 1892.

xv. Subsequently the Lieutenant-Governor of Bengal, in his letter to the Government of India of the 2nd January 1893, stated that he desired to reconsider the matter in view of the distress and dissatisfaction, caused by the partial removal of what is valued as an important privilege, having been so great and so much beyond his expectation, and he suggested a Commission to consider the matter. This suggestion was approved of by the Government of India and the Secretary of State, and the present Commission has accordingly been appointed.

4. We understand our instructions to direct us to report with as little delay as possible whether in our opinion the classes of offences triable by jury in the seven districts should continue as notified on 20th October 1892, or should be altered by reverting to the former classification or by adopting any new classification, and also to report what changes, if any, in the present Code of Criminal Procedure are desirable to prevent miscarriages of justice.

5. We propose to consider, firstly, how far it has been established that trial by jury as introduced into Bengal in 1862 has proved unsuccessful with regard to the administration of justice, to what extent any failures of justice imputed to it are attributable to juries, and, lastly, whether this system of trial should be withdrawn in respect of certain classes of offences so triable or whether, with proper safeguards, it should be maintained as under the orders passed in 1862.

The working of the system generally.

6. We have already shown the procedure in Sessions trials in Bengal since 1793, and the working of the jury system from its introduction in 1862 up to 1884, when the Local Government did not consider it to be a failure but thought that it had "worked fairly well."

7. In 1890 inquiry was made into the system of trial by jury and reports were called for by Government on the following points :—

(1) how the system had worked ;

(2) what opinion was entertained as to its merits for the repression of crime ; and

(3) what improvements, if any, were called for in its application.

The Judges of the High Court considered that the system was capable of improvement. Their opinion was not especially asked as to any withdrawal of the system in respect either of locality or of the classes of offences triable by jury. It was evidently thought by the Judges that no opinion on this subject was required by the terms of the reference to them, and though some of the Judges stated that difficulty had been experienced in obtaining proper verdicts in certain classes of offences, especially in cases of homicide, and various amendments in the existing law were suggested, only one Judge suggested the abolition of trial by jury in capital cases.

The reports from the Executive and Judicial Officers varied. The majority of the Executive Officers was opposed to trial by jury and condemned the system. Some of the Judical Officers reported strongly in favour of it ; others reported against it. It is to be observed that in 1884 also the reports of the Executive Officers were more adverse than those of the Judicial Officers, and that in 1890 many of the Judicial Officers who reported against the system based much of their opposition to it on grounds not special to Bengal but equally applicable to England. Many of them were of opinion that in any country a trained Judge is a better tribunal for discovering the truth than an untrained jury. Apart from general considerations many of them complained of the reluctance of juries to convict in cases of homicide or murder, and of the reluctance of the High Court to interfere with the verdicts of juries in cases referred under section 307 of the Code of Criminal Procedure, 1882.

8. The Local Government was of opinion that these reports showed that trial by jury was a failure in Bengal in its present shape, and that, its total abolition being undesirable on political grounds, early steps should be taken to make such changes in its working as might be best calculated to limit the injury which it entailed.

The Local Government accordingly recommended that references by Sessions Judges, when they differ in opinion from the verdict of a jury, should be compulsory ; that it should be incumbent on the Sessions Judge to ascertain and record fully the reasons of the jury for their verdict, as "a simple and reasonable way to enabling him to be sure that he ought to disagree with the jury," and that there should be a right of appeal on the facts against the verdict of a jury, when the jurors are not unanimous, unless the Judge records his agreement with the majority. The Local Government also expressed its opinion that "the system of trial by jury in Bengal is particularly unfitted for certain classes of cases, especially those relating to murder and rioting" and it accordingly proposed to the Government of India that the trial by jury of offences under Chapters VIII, XVI (with some exceptions) and XVIII of the Indian Penal Code should be withdrawn, but that the system should be extended to offences under Chapter XX (relating to marriage). In the opinion of the Local Government the evidence adduced clearly pointed to the necessity of making the withdrawals proposed.

9. The Government of India were of opinion that the defects of the present system of trial by jury in Bengal, as well as in other Provinces, appeared to be mainly attributable to two causes:

(1) To the extension of the jury system (a) to areas to which it is unsuitable, and (b) to classes of offences which, as the experience now gained has shown, ought not to be cognizable by juries.

(2) To the fact that the provisions of section 307 of the Code of Criminal Procedure, which were intended to give Sessions Judges and the High Court power to remedy and correct wrong verdicts, have failed to fulfil this intention.

After pointing out that the Lieutenant-Governor had, under the existing law, full power to modify the orders of 1862 so as to withdraw any classes of offences from trial by jury, the Government of India expressed their conviction that the action which the Lieutenant-Governor proposed to take was fully justified by the results reported.

The Government of India were opposed to the proposal to make reference by a Sessions Judge compulsory in every case in which he might disagree from the verdict of a jury; they disapproved of the proposal to empower Sessions Judges to question juries as to the reasons for their verdicts, except in so far as might be necessary to ascertain what the verdicts were, as provided by section 303 of the Code, but they noted for consideration on an amendment of the law the question whether before or after a general verdict has been taken, special verdicts should not be required on particular issues of fact, if not on the general credibility of particular evidence; and lastly, they disapproved of allowing an appeal against the decision of a jury, at least until all other available methods for the improvement of the system had been exhausted.

10. On 20th October 1892 orders, as already stated, were passed by the Lieutenant-Governor withdrawing from trial by jury in the seven districts of Bengal various classes of offences, and extending that form of trial to offences relating to marriage, as well as to abetments of, and attempts to commit, such offences.

11. In their Despatch to the Secretary of State dated 21st December 1892, the Government of India thus summed up the result of the inquiries held and the information so acquired—

"The results of the recent inquiry and the combined weight of high authority, which it disclosed, appeared to us to point distinctly to the adoption of one or other of two alternatives (1) either by legislation to impose the further restrictions on the jury system which are declared by the Local Government and the High Courts to be necessary to provide against failures of justice, or (2) to invite the responsible Local Governments to consider the question of making such necessary changes in the system as are practicable under the existing law."

12. We think that in the recent inquiry sufficient attention has not been given, by many of the officers who have reported against it, to the inherent merits of jury trial as a system, which may be held to compensate for its defects, or to the special advantages which it possesses in a country like India, and which must be set off against the special disadvantages necessarily to be expected. As to the first, we would quote the words of Sir J. F. Stephen in his History of the Criminal Law of England (Vol. I, p. 572), which express our opinions in more appropriate language than we could offer. After considering the relative advantages to a proper administration of justice from trial by a jury, special and common, and from trial by a Judge alone, and generally expressing an opinion adverse to trial by common juries, Sir J. F. Stephen proceeds to discuss the benefits resulting from the system of trial by jury :—

"There is a third point of view from which trial by jury must be considered, namely, its collateral advantages, and those I think are not only incontestable in themselves, but are of such importance that I should be sorry to see any change in the system though I am alive to its defects. They are these :—

"In the first place, though I do not think that trial by jury really is more just than trial by a Judge without a jury would be, it is generally considered to be so, and not unnaturally Though the Judges are, and are known to be, independent of the executive Government, it is naturally felt that their sympathies are likely to be on the side of authority. The public at large feel more sympathy with jurymen than they do with Judges, and accept their verdicts with much less hesitation and distrust than they would feel towards judgments, however ably written or expressed.

"In the next place, trial by jury interests large numbers of people in the administration of justice and makes them responsible for it. It is difficult to overestimate the importance of this. It gives a degree of power and of popularity to the administration of justice which could hardly be derived from any other source.

"Lastly, though I am, as every Judge must be, a prejudiced witness on the subject, I think that the position in which trial by jury places the Judge is one in which such powers as he possesses can be most effectually used for the public service. * * * * * * * *

"I think, however, that the institution does place the Judge in a position in which, with a view to the public interest, he ought to be placed,—that of a guide and adviser to those who are ultimately to decide, and a moderator in the struggle on the result of which they, are to give their decision. The interposition of a man, whose duty it is to do equal justice to all between the actual combatants and the actual Judges on the result of the combat, gives to the whole proceedings the air of gravity, dignity, and humanity, which ought to be, and usually is, characteristic of an English Court and which ought to make every such Court a school of truth, justice, and virtue. In short, if trial by jury is looked at from the political and moral point of view, everything is to be said in its favour, and nothing can be said against it. Whatever defects it may have might be effectually removed by having more highly qualified jurors. I think that to be on the jury list ought to be regarded as an honour and distinction. It is an office at least as important as, say, that of guardians of the poor, and I think that if arrangements were made for the comfort of jurors, and for the payment of their expenses when on duty, men of standing and consideration might be willing and even desirous to fill the position."

13. As regards India the system has special merits and special drawbacks. Some of its special advantages arise from the fact that our Criminal law is foreign, and that it is desirable to familiarize the people of India with it, by making them take part in its administration under the guidance of Judges who can explain to them its reasonableness and justice. Some, from the fact that the Sessions Judges are also foreigners and that as compared with them, even after they have acquired experience from a prolonged residence in the country, a local jury (supposing the jurors to be intelligent and honest) should be better able to draw inferences of fact and to discriminate between the truth and falsehood of conflicting oral evidence given in their own language. Further, the odium of what may appear harsh punishments is shifted in great part, from the Government, and the dread, however unfounded it may be, of the all-pervading influence of the Government affecting the judgment is removed. These advantages are sufficient to compensate for a certain number of cases in which criminals may escape conviction or may be convicted of lesser crimes than the evidence might warrant.

On the other hand it was always evident from the beginning that the introduction of the system in India was an experiment involving certain risks. The people were unused to it; the diversity of races, religions and castes might cause a bias in the minds of the jurors in particular cases; it was known that there was amongst many of them a reluctance to be accessory to the taking of life. This last feeling varies much in different parts of the country and among different sects, and is said in some places, such as Surat, to form an insuperable obstacle to securing a conviction in a case of murder. These difficulties no doubt deterred the Government from introducing the system over the whole province of Bengal and led them to introduce it in the first instance in the seven most intelligent and advanced districts. These difficulties also led to the introduction of section 263 of the Code of 1872, now re-enacted in section 307 of the Code of 1882, so as to correct the miscarriages which must occasionally occur in any country where trial by jury exists and which experience was held to have shown occurred in an appreciable number of cases in Bengal.

14. The opinions before us show that experienced officers have frequently complained of the prevalence of wrong verdicts, which they have attributed to various innate defects in the jurors. The statistics on the other hand do not show that there has been any larger number of such cases than might have been reasonably expected, and they certainly do not indicate any break down of the system. We think that considerable weight should be given to the opinions of competent observers. Still the statistics are of great importance as indicating the number of trials, the number of cases in which the Judge has disagreed with the jury, the number of cases referred, and the result of references; and they form a sound basis for judging how far the matters complained of have operated so largely as to seriously interfere with the administration of justice. Opinions of this character have been expressed from time to time since 1862, but they have never been accepted as sufficient material for the condemnation of the system. There is reason to think tha the variance between the adverse opinions and the actual results shown by the statistics can be explained by the bias caused by the occurrence of some case, in which the unexpected results have shocked these officers, who are thus too easily led to believe in the prevalence of the influence which may have caused a failure of justice in an individual case. Having formed this strong opinion and probably reported it to their superior officers, and having satisfied themselves of the existence of certain tendencies or prejudices calculated to interfere with the correctness of verdicts, and seen some instances of their operation, they have too readily assumed that these tendencies and prejudices were overwhelming and generally operative to the subversion of justice, without considering how far education or a sense of responsibility might counteract them and might have led to the majority of the verdicts being such as could not have been given if the tendencies and prejudices in question had swayed the decision of the jury.

Assuming that such tendencies and prejudices on the part of jurors do exist the statistics show that they do not operate to anything like the extent which might be expected from the perusal of many of the reports made to Government.

15. It must be borne in mind that some of the erroneous verdicts are probably due to want of practice on the part of the Judges in the very difficult art of charging a jury. A good and clear charge or an inefficient one frequently makes all the difference in a verdict. The careful appointment of only the best and most experienced Judges to jury districts must mitigate this danger, but the exigencies of the service must occasionably cause inexperienced officers to be temporarily appointed.

Some of the verdicts alleged to be erroneous may be fairly attributable to distrust of police evidence and of the manner in which cases are got up by the police. This distrust has not been without reason in the past, but steps have been recently taken to improve the police generally, and in particular to secure that the investigation and preparation of cases shall be entrusted to a higher and more trustworthy class of officers. With these improvements the distrust may be expected to gradually disappear.

Steps also have been taken to revise the jury lists so as to obtain a better class of jurors. No doubt this will have a most appreciable effect upon the character of the verdicts, and we notice that one Sessions Judge already reports an improvement from this cause.

16. For such erroneous verdicts as may be given, in spite of all improvements of the kind we have mentioned, and in spite of the increasing education of the people, the remedy of a reference under section 307 of the Code of Criminal Procedure ought, we think, to be sufficient. But there is a considerable body of opinion that this safeguard does not work as well as it ought to do owing to two causes,—the reluctance of Sessions Judges to refer cases, and the disinclination of the High Court to disturb a verdict when the case has been referred. This evil, so far as it exists, may, we think, be met by an alteration of the law. This matter we shall discuss later on. It cannot safely be inferred that, in every case in which a Sessions Judge has disagreed with a verdict but has declined to refer the case, the verdict was necessarily wrong. Even after allowing for the reluctance to refer abovementioned, many of the cases must belong to that class where the Judge is not sufficiently confident of the correctness of his own conclusions, as against those of the jury, to feel that for the ends of justice he is bound to press his opinion, or to be certain that the case is not one in which two opinions can be reasonably formed on the evidence. In such cases there is a fair probability that the jury may be right, for there are many referred cases in which the High Court has on a full consideration of the evidence adopted the same conclusion as the jury and rejected that of the Judge.

17. We have examined certain statistics showing the percentages of judgments of Sessions Judges sitting without a jury which have been reversed or modified on appeal. There is no possibility of drawing from these statistics any safe deduction as to the comparative correctness of such judgments and the verdicts of juries, because the former are open to an appeal on the facts in every case at the instance of the accused, whereas no appeal on facts ordinarily lies from the verdict of a jury. These statistics, however, show how possible it is for Judges conscientiously to come to different conclusions on the same evidence in a large percentage of cases, and emphasise the observation that it is unsafe to assume, as a rule, that the Judge is right and the jury wrong when they disagree.

Under section 374 of the Criminal Procedure Code all sentences of death are referred to the High Court for confirmation, and that Court, before confirming any such sentence, considers the evidence, whether the case has been tried by a jury or not. The statistics for six years show that 220 cases were referred under this section, and that in 18 cases, or about 8 per cent., the persons convicted and sentenced by the Court of Session were acquitted by the High Court. These cases are from all the districts of Bengal, including jury districts; and the figures indicate that, whatever be the form of tribunal, a certain percentage of reversals must be expected upon revision by a higher Court, and that erroneous convictions occur in a considerable number of cases.

18. We have not been able to find any reliable evidence of any deterioration in the verdicts of jurors since 1884. We have prepared, from the Annual Administration Reports of the High Court, a statement showing the results of trial by jury since 1877. This statement shows the number of cases tried by juries, the number of such cases in which the verdicts have been approved by the Sessions Judge, the number of cases referred, and the result of the cases tried by the High Court on such references. The returns on which the Government of India and the Bengal Government have proceeded relate only to the five years ending 1891. We have accordingly also showed the results for each of the preceding periods of five years, which are as follows :—

* In 14 cases of 1884 no approval or disapproval was expressed, the Judge having vacated office without recording his opinion.

† Cases actually disposed of during the period.

These returns, in our opinion, show no deterioration during the five last years, on the figures of which period the system of trial by jury has been condemned. If the slight variation can be accepted as any criterion, it would seem to show less cause for dissatisfaction. If, on the other hand, we take the returns of 1883, which the Government of Bengal must have had before them when their letter of 1884 was written, stating that, though the system of trial by jury might not be said to be "anything like a complete success," it had "worked fairly well," we find that out of 344 trials held, the Judge concurred with the verdicts in 292 cases, disapproved wholly in 33, and partly in 19 cases, and referred only 15 cases, out of which the verdicts were accepted in only 3 and set aside in 12. In 1891, on the other hand, the results were much more favourable to juries, for out of 20 references made and tried, the verdicts were set aside and affirmed in an equal number. So far, therefore, as statistics go, the results certainly do not indicate a deterioration.

19. After the fullest consideration of the very abundant materials before us we cannot come to the conclusion that the jury system in its present shape has proved a failure in Bengal. Our general conclusion is the same as that arrived at by the Local Government in 1884, that "the system has worked fairly well in the more advanced districts to which it has been applied." We think that the evils complained of can be sufficiently met by progress on the lines previously followed and by slight alterations of the law so as to express, in terms open to no doubt, what we understand to have been the intention of the Legislature in 1872 and 1882.

Murder Cases.

20. It is in trials for murder that complaints have been most general of failure of justice because juries are unwilling to convict.

This is a complaint which has been made ever since the introduction of the system, and is one which section 307 was designed to meet. But the statistics show that the reluctance to convict in capital cases, so far as it exists as a sentiment, has been to a great extent overcome. We do not find that it can be imputed to any of the seven districts in Bengal, as it has been to three districts in Bombay, that there exists such an antipathy to the taking of life in any form on the part of a large and influential class of the community, as renders it impossible to obtain verdicts of conviction, however clear the evidence may be. We observe that both the Government and the High Court of Bombay propose that charges of murder should still remain triable by jury in the two jury districts of that Presidency to which these special objections do not apply. The complaints in Bengal are more of a general character, that juries are prone to acquit in cases of homicide, as they are too ready to convict in cases of dacoity and kindred offences.

Taking the statistics of trials by jury in murder cases in the seven districts of Bengal, the results cannot, we think, be regarded as very unfavourable; nor are they especially unfavourable in cases in which Brahmins were the persons under trial.

We find that in six years, i.e., from 1887 to 1892, the total number of murder cases tried in the jury districts was 404. Of the persons charged with murder in these cases, 28 were Brahmins. Of these, 13 were acquitted and 8 convicted on verdicts concurred in by the Sessions Judge. Two cases remain; in one, a case from Nuddea, the verdict of the jury, though not approved by the Sessions Judge, was not referred to the High Court, evidently on the ground that the Sessions Judge's dissent was not complete. In the other case a Brahmin named Khan Chand Boid, a constable employed to guard the Government Treasury at Hooghly, was convicted by the High Court against the verdict of the jury and was sentenced to transportation for life.

The Reports show that in one case (20 W. R., 19) a jury at Hooghly convicted one Ramsodoy Chuckerbutty, a Brahmin, of murder, and the Sessions Judge passed sentence of death, but a majority of the Judges of the High Court who tried the case acquitted on the facts. In an unreported case at Howrah a Brahmin, named Ram Charan Mookerjee, was in 1891 convicted of murder by a Hindu Jury and sentenced to death, but was acquitted by the High Court.

No case has been brought to our notice in which an erroneous verdict can be attributed to undue deference to the social position of the accused person. If there be any such case, it is not improbable that the verdict may be due in a great measure to greater care in the defence and to the accused being better able than an ordinary criminal to obtain the services of an experienced and competent legal practitioner.

We have had inquiries made as to the status and position of the persons whose cases have been referred to the High Court by Sessions Judges who disagreed with the verdict, and we find that in an overwhelming majority of cases these persons were of humble position and low caste and in many instances too poor to afford the expense of being represented at the hearing of the case before the High Court.

Riot Cases.

21. It has been said that riot cases ought to be withdrawn because they are complicated, because there is apt to be local feeling, and because the results of the trials are unsatisfactory; and the Shambazar case is quoted as a convincing proof of this. These cases in Bengal present peculiar features. Generally there are two parties to the riot, and the prosecuting party are unwilling to state the actual truth as to the occurrence, lest it should appear that they too have rioted. There is no class of cases in which it is more difficult to ascertain the truth as regards either the circumstances of the riot or the participation of the accused in it. It is not unusual for the prosecuting party to introduce as actors in the riot persons belonging to the opposing party who were not present at the time. The large number of cases in which all or some of those who have been convicted by Sessions Judges without a jury have been acquitted by the High Court on the ground of the untrustworthy character of the evidence or of inconclusive identification, shows how unsafe it is to conclude that it is always the fault of the tribunal if, when a riot has undoubtedly taken place, it is impossible to obtain a conviction. The untrustworthy character of the evidence in these cases has usually more to do with this result than any incompetence in the tribunal.

Much might be done to simplify these cases for the jury by trying the accused in small batches, as allowed by section 239, and by the Judge, after summing up generally on the circumstances of the alleged riot, summing up clearly as to the evidence of identification against each of the accused, and its value.

The objection arising from local feeling can be met, where it exists, by the transfer of the cases to another district under section 526.

22. The Shambazar case is a very peculiar one. There was a notorious riot of a very grave character which could not be doubted or disputed. We have not the evidence before us so as to express an opinion on it even if it were desirable to do so; but it is, we think, clear that there must have been very grave defects in the evidence of identification. For, had the identification of the accused been as clear as the occurrence of the riot, it is not conceivable that the experienced Judge who tried the case would not have referred it to the High Court. He must have been well aware of the numerous cases in which the High Court has reversed unanimous verdicts of juries when they appeared to be clearly wrong.

We do not find any sufficient case made out for the withdrawal of this class of cases, i.e., Chapter VIII of the Penal Code, from the cognisance of juries.

Forgery, etc.

23. No cases have been brought to our notice to show any substantial reason for withdrawing cases under Chapter XVIII of the Indian Penal Code (offences relating to documents or to trade or property marks) from trial by jury. The complaints made have been of a general character and have not been established.

Working and proposed amendment of section 307 of the Code of Criminal Procedure.

24. It has been urged that the remedies provided by law to prevent miscarriages of justice through erroneous verdicts have not been consistently applied, that there has been reluctance on the part of Sessions Judges to refer cases which should have been referred, and that in dealing with referred cases there has not been that uniformity of practice amongst the Judges of the High Court which is so necessary for an efficient administration of justice. We have had under consideration the judgments delivered in such cases during the last five years, and also in other cases published in the Law Reports. It has been argued that in some of these cases, so far as the judgments show, the opinions of the Sessions Judges have not been taken into consideration, and that the Judges of the High Court have been hampered in the consideration of the cases on their merits by analogies of English law applicable to the revision of verdicts in civil cases by Judges who are not judges of the facts, and have rather required the party supporting the reference to show that the particular verdict was "perverse or unreasonable," which are the words used in the older English cases; or, if the case was dealt with without argument, have considered the case only from that point of view; although there are cases in which the Judges have considered the evidence on the merits in order to determine whether the view taken by the jury or that taken by the Sessions Judge was correct.

On the other hand it has been argued that all that can be deduced from the reported cases is that some Judges have given more weight to the opinion of a jury than others; but that as this manifestly depends on the different points of view from which different Judges regard the same matters, the Legislature could not possibly lay down any rule regarding the degree of weight to be attached to the verdict of the jury or the opinion of the Sessions Judge.

To remove all doubts and to define the duties of Sessions Judges and of the High Court in more clear language, we recommend that for the words "so completely that he considers it" in the first paragraph of section 307 of the Criminal Procedure Code, 1882, the words "and is clearly of opinion that it is" should be substituted, and that the last paragraph of the same section should be modified so as to run somewhat in the following terms:—

"In dealing with the case so submitted the High Court shall consider the entire evidence, giving due weight to the verdict of the jury and to the opinion of the Sessions Judge and of the dissentient jurors, if any, and may exercise etc., etc.," continuing in the terms of that section. The words in italics are those which in our opinion should be introduced.

25. We learn the intention of the Legislature as to the duty of Sessions Judges from the observations of the Honourable Mr. J. F. Stephen:—

"We do not, of course, mean that the Judge should act in this manner in every case in which he has doubts as to the propriety of a verdict, or even in those cases in which he feels that, if he had been a juror, he would not have returned the same verdict. Our intention is that he should exercise the power in question in those cases only in which it is necessary to do so, in order to prevent a manifest failure of justice; and having regard to the strong motive which the Judge always has for avoiding all future trouble by accepting the view taken by a jury, I think there is little reason to fear that the power will be abused."

To encourage disagreement from the verdict of a jury, or to require a reference in every case in which the Sessions Judge would have come to a different conclusion, would be attended with mischievous results. Amongst these we may point out that it would by degrees utterly destroy all sense of responsibility amongst jurors, a feeling which it is obviously desirable to strengthen, rather than to impair; and the unfortunate effects that would probably ensue from the removal of all such trials to the High Court to be decided on the bare record, and without the advantage of hearing the evidence given.

We understand the meaning of the law to be, that if the Sessions Judge, after considering the fact that the jury or a majority of them have arrived at a certain conclusion, disagrees with that conclusion, and is clearly of opinion that it would occasion a failure of justice if he were to accept the verdict, it is his duty then, and then only, whatever the result may be, to refer the case to the High Court. The two elements (1) disagreement with the verdict and (2) the opinion that he cannot record and give full effect to the verdict without causing a failure of justice, are distinct and should be kept so. The alteration proposed is slight, but we trust that it will serve to make the law clearer and to emphasise the duty of a Sessions Judge not to record a verdict which he is satisfied will cause a failure of justice merely because he is uncertain whether the High Court will concur in his opinion, while making it equally clear that he ought not to refer unless he is satisfied that by giving effect to a verdict a failure of justice will ensue.

26. With regard to the second amendment recommended, we think that it was intended that the High Court should form an independent opinion on the evidence in the same way as it is bound to do, and invariably does, in an appeal in a case tried with Assessors, giving due weight to the opinion of the Sessions Judge as well as to the verdict of the jury. If we are correct in this view, it is desirable that the law should be expressed in clear terms admitting of no doubt.

With the law thus expressed we think that sufficient safeguards would be provided against any miscarriages of justice from erroneous verdicts.

27. After considering all the matters above set forth, including the probable effect of the further safeguards we have recommended, and the fact that for thirty years the offences specified in the orders of 1862 have been tried by juries, and that grave distress and dissatisfaction has been caused by the partial withdrawal of what has come to be regarded as a boon and a privilege, and considering also that, while it is necessary that justice should be administered, it is equally necessary that the subject should feel and be satisfied that it is being properly administered, we have come to the unanimous conclusion that the classification of offences triable by jury as it stood before the 20th October 1892 should be reverted to.

The additional safeguards and improvements recommended in our report will, we anticipate, diminish such evils as exist at present, but it is not in our opinion necessary or desirable to delay reverting to the former classification until the necessary legislation can be carried out. At the same time we think it desirable that the alteration in the law recommended by us should be made with the least possible delay.

28. We have also considered how far there should be any changes in the classification of offences triable by jury. We can suggest no improvement in the classification of offences as given in the orders of 1862. We prefer a classification by Chapters of the Penal Code to one by the degree of punishment which may be imposed, as in Bombay. The Bengal classification is more simple and not open to confusion resulting from charges for offences not triable by jury being added to charges for offences so triable.

Offences relating to marriage.

29. We observe that by the recent order offences under Chapter XX, Indian Penal Code (offences relating to marriage), have been made triable by jury, and we have considered whether this is reasonable and expedient. The change has no doubt been prompted by a desire to leave to juries the determination of cases in which matters relating to their social or religious habits or customs may be involved. It seems to us, however, that in consequence of the diversity of religious and social habits and caste-customs, this object will not be attained so well as in a trial with the assistance of assessors. The jurors are selected by lot, and it may so happen that by this process none of the very religion or class which should be associated for the trial may be selected. For instance, where the parties in a trial for an offence relating to marriage may be all Mahomedans, a jury consisting entirely of Hindus may be selected by lot, and where the parties are Chamars or members of the lowest classes, a jury of Mahomedans or Hindus of the higher and educated classes, ignorant of all the habits and customs of the parties, may be selected. On the other hand, in a trial with the assistance of assessors the very opposite results can be secured, because the Sessions Judge is able to choose persons to act as assessors, who are of the same caste or religion or have intimate knowledge of the customs of the parties. Advantages too can be derived in such cases from the more intimate relations which exist between a Judge and assessors than between a Judge and a jury. If, therefore, we have rightly understood the reasons which have induced the Local Government to include offences relating to marriage amongst those triable by jury, we would recommend that they be excluded.

Extension of the system to other offences.

30. We have also had under consideration whether trial by jury in the seven selected districts should be extended to the trial of other offences. We feel, however, that, with the information before us, we are not competent to express any safe opinion on this matter. It is one that can be determined only after detailed inquiry which, from the instructions that we have received to submit our report with as little delay as possible, we have not thought it our duty to undertake. It is a matter that can be separately dealt with by Government.

31. Several minor points in connection with the terms of the reference made to us have been considered and discussed, and upon these we desire also to express an opinion.

Section 303, Code of Criminal Procedure.

32. It has been suggested that the terms of section 303 of the Code of Criminal Procedure should be amended so as to enable a Sessions Judge to obtain more clearly the opinions of the jury on parts of the evidence so as to learn and place on record the grounds upon which the verdict was arrived at. We are not in favour of any alteration in the present law, which provides sufficient means for obtaining a verdict, and we think that there are strong objections to anything of the nature of a cross-examination of the jurors as to details of a case so as to obtain their opinion on portions of the evidence. Amongst these it will be sufficient to say that it must very frequently happen that the jurors may individually arrive at the same conclusion by different processes of reasoning, or they may find difficulty in expressing intelligently or logically a conclusion fairly arrived at on consideration of the entire case. No doubt in certain cases, for instance, in cases of culpable homicide not amounting to murder, or of house-breaking with intent to commit an offence, it may be necessary to give a special verdict to determine the exact offence; so as to regulate the sentence; but the terms of the present law sufficiently provide for this and we are opposed to any alteration for the purposes suggested.

It has also been proposed to permit questions to be put to the jurors after verdict delivered, so as to enable the Sessions Judge to determine whether he should refer the case to the High Court, as well as to enable the High Court itself in a referred case to learn whether a verdict was on reasonable and proper grounds; but the same objections equally apply. We prefer to adopt the course recommended by us, viz., that each case referred by a Sessions Judge should be tried by the High Court on its merits on the evidence, as less likely to cause embarrassment and more certain to ensure a just and proper decision.

Special Verdicts.

33. We have considered anxiously whether it is practicable to enable the Judge to direct the jury to return a special verdict on issues framed by him. This proposal is supported by high authority, and we are fully sensible of the advantages it would be to the High Court in referred cases to have a special, instead of a general, verdict to deal with, but we have reluctantly come to the conclusion that such a procedure would be liable to create greater evils than it would remedy.

Special Juries.

34. We agree with the conclusion arrived at by the Government of India that it is not desirable to have Special Juries, in so far as these may tend to weaken Common Juries, but at the same time we are of opinion that cases may occur in which the employment of a Special Jury may be highly desirable in the interests of justice as well as to satisfy public opinion, and we think that means may be provided which will meet the objection raised. It might be provided that while there is a separate list of Special Jurors, the gentlemen on that list should not be exempted from ordinary service as Common Jurors. They might be included also in the general list and be liable to serve when drawn for ordinary trials without being reserved only for trials by Special Juries. No additional service within the prescribed period of six months should be required. It might be left to the Local Government on consideration of the jury list and other matters, peculiar to a district to which trial by jury may have been extended to declare that in the Sessions Court of that district trials by Special Jury might be held, and it might be left to the discretion of the Sessions Judge of that district to determine in each case, on application made, whether a trial should be so held, provided that the application be made in sufficient time to summon a Special Jury. If this recommendation be accepted, it will become necessary to amend the law, so as to provide for the preparation of Special Jury lists, and for summoning such Jurors.

Number of Jurors.

35. It has been proposed by the Government of Bengal to reduce the number of jurors from five to three. The law permits a jury to consist of from nine to three members, according as the Local Government may direct. Under the Code of 1861, the minimum was five, and seven was the number fixed by the Local Government for juries in Bengal. The Code of 1872 reduced the minimum to three, and in 1873, with the concurrence of the Judges of the High Court, the number was fixed at five. We are aware of no reason for a further reduction. It is not stated that under the present rule service on juries is too frequent or irksome. On the other hand, we think that three, except on some special ground, is too small a number for a jury, and that if improper influences are attempted, they are more likely to be successful on the smaller number.

Age of Jurors.

36. We also find no sufficient grounds assigned for altering the limits of age of persons liable to serve as jurors, and we observe that this limit was fixed by the Code of 1861 and has remained unchanged until the present time.

Area of Selection of Jurors.

37. Under the Codes of 1861 and 1872, a jury list was prepared of "persons residing within 10 miles from the place where Sessions trials are held, or within such other distance as the Local Government may think fit to direct," but the Code of 1882, Section 319, made all persons between the prescribed ages liable to serve as jurors at any trial within the district within which they reside. We prefer that it should be left to the discretion of the Local Government as under previous legislation to determine, on consideration of the circumstances of each district, the area from which a juror should be selected, as districts vary in extent and in the means of travelling available.

Revision of Jury Lists.

38. We observe that attention has been directed to this subject, and that in the revisions recently made the lists have been considerably reduced by the exclusion of many unfit persons. There can be no doubt that much benefit will result from this, and strict attention should be enjoined to this important duty in the future.

We notice that in one district the recent revision of the list of jurors has resulted in the exclusion of the names of all Honorary Magistrates, that is to say, of a class of men who, for the very reasons for which they have been given Magisterial powers, are best fitted to serve as jurors. They are not liable to exemption under any of the provisions of section 320 of the Procedure Code; and we think that all Honorary Magistrates as such should be included in all lists of jurors in the districts in which they reside.

We would also invite attention to the large number of exemptions granted under clause (k) of section 320 of the Code. These include certain officers of the Eastern Bengal State Railway,* all Barristers practising in the Mofussil†, District and Assistant Superintendents of Traffic and Guards on the East Indian Railway,‡ and local Auditors on the Staff of Examiners of Local Accounts in Bengal§. The Chief Customs Authority or Chief Customs Officer is also exempted under section 10 of Act VIII of 1878, and he has power under that section to exempt from service as a juror any other officer of Customs whom he deems it necessary to exempt on grounds of public duty. We would suggest that the necessity of exempting such a large body of men, who primâ facie are well fitted to serve as jurors, should be carefully reconsidered. Such exemptions deprive the jury lists of some of the persons best fitted to serve, and further tend to take from the position of juror much of the dignity which should attach to it.

Accommodation for Jurors.

39. It has also been represented to us that sufficient attention is not paid to the convenience and comfort of those summoned as jurors, and that in consequence native gentlemen of recognised social position are reluctant to attend. The matter was dealt with by a Circular of the High Court, dated 9th August 1865, but it does not appear that adequate steps have been taken to give effect to the instructions regarding the accommodation for jurors.

Remuneration of Jurors.

40. On this point we are not unanimous and find some difficulty in making any recommendation. The question is one which more intimately concerns the native community, and our members who represent that community differ in opinion. The matter is of no great importance, and may be left for settlement by Government after inquiry such as we have not been able to make.

Seclusion of Jurors.

41. The question of the seclusion of jurors during the trial and up to the delivery of their verdict is one which was considered by the Local Government and by the High Court in 1867. It is sufficient for us to say that the High Court has power under section 296, Criminal Procedure Code, to make rules in this direction, that it has never seen its way to framing any such rules, and that we find ourselves equally unable to suggest any rules which would not be repugnant to the prejudices and customs of the native community in Bengal.

Right of Appeal.

42. We are aware that opinion in England is inclined to an appeal, but we are not aware with what restriction it would be allowed; we are, therefore, unable to determine how far any recommendation that we could make would be in accordance with the rule in England and also applicable to Bengal. It has been recommended on high authority that an appeal should be allowed in cases in which the verdict is not unanimous and where the Sessions Judge also disagrees, but does not consider it necessary to refer the case to the High Court. We are of opinion, however, that section 307 of the Criminal Procedure Code, with the alterations that we have suggested, will provide adequate protection against failures of justice.

43. It has been suggested to us that some provision should be made for a verbatim record of Sessions Judge's charge to the jury, but, in the opinion of the majority of us, none of the suggestions made on this point are practicable. Heads of charge to Jury, S. 367, C. P. C.

44. In dealing with all these matters, we have abstained from going beyond the strict terms of the reference made to us. We may mention that discussion of other matters has been invited, but we have, for the reasons stated, not taken them into consideration. We consider that the matters referred to us are defined by the two paragraphs of the Resolution of the Government of India dated the 23rd February 1893, set out in the commencement of this report, and that we are not authorized to travel beyond them.

We, the undersigned, accordingly report that, in our opinion, it is desirable that the classes of offences which, before the 20th October 1892, were triable by jury in the seven districts of Bengal abovementioned, should be triable by jury in those districts, and that the present classification should be amended accordingly.

We further report that, in our opinion, it is desirable, for the purpose of preventing miscarriage of justice, to amend section 307 of the Criminal Procedure Code by the substitution of the words "and is clearly of opinion that it is," for the words "so completely that he considers it," in the first paragraph of that section; and by the insertion in the third paragraph of the words "shall consider the entire evidence, giving due weight to the verdict of the jury and to the opinion of the Sessions Judge and of the dissentient jurors, if any and"; and that it is also desirable for the same purpose to make such further amendments in the Criminal Procedure Code as may be necessary to carry out our recommendations hereinbefore set forth as regards special jurors and the area from which jurors should be selected.

Note by Sir Romesh Chunder Mitter, Kt.

I. As regards the question whether Trial by Jury in the seven selected districts should be extended to the trial of other offences, I think it right to add that in my opinion there are many offences in the Indian Penal Code and other Acts which were not made triable by jury in 1862, but which may now with advantage be made so triable. Certain offences under the Penal Code were probably not originally made triable by jury because they were not exclusively triable by Courts of Session. But cases coming within this class are, by reason of their importance, frequently committed to Courts of Session for trial, and many of these should, in my opinion, be tried by jury in jury districts. There seems, for instance, no reason why offences under Chapter IX or Chapter XXII of the Code should not be triable by a Jury when committed to the Sessions, considering that offences against Public Justice are so triable. Similarly the offence of Defamation (Chapter XXI) seems to me to be an offence eminently fit for trial by a jury.

II. As regards offences under special Acts, I am of opinion that there are several which might conveniently be made triable by jury. For example, when in the course of proceedings under the Registration Act, a person is charged with using a forged document and making a false statement with reference to it, it is manifestly inconvenient that, as regards the charge of forgery under the Penal Code, he should be tried by a jury, while on the same facts as regards the charge under Section 82 of the Registration Act he should be tried by the Judge with the aid of Sessions. This anomaly could be avoided by making all offences in the Sessions Court in jury districts triable by jury except those which are specially mentioned by the Local Government.

III. It seems to me of the utmost importance that in cases tried by jury there should be an accurate record kept of the Judge's charge to the jury. At present though the law requires that the Sessions Judge should record the heads of his charge to the jury, it contains no provision as to when or how such record should be made. As a matter of practice I am informed Sessions Judges generally record from memory or their own notes the substance of the charge delivered orally, after the verdict has been taken. This course is open to many obvious objections and is likely to lead to unsatisfactory results. When an appeal has to be preferred to the High Court in a jury case, the appellant in appealing against an alleged misdirection of the Judge is sometimes forced to complain of the Judge's charge, not as it was probably laid before the jury, but as it has been recorded by the Judge after the verdict has been delivered. I am of opinion that the record should contain a strictly accurate report of the charge as delivered by the Judge to the jury.

IV. In my opinion there are two courses, the adoption of either of which would secure this end :—1st, it should be made obligatory upon the Judge to write out his summing up before he proceeds to charge the Jury. But this is a course which I am informed, though occasionally adopted by Judges in the Moffussil, is fraught with inconvenience and is likely to delay the trial. I am therefore disposed to recommend that a Bench Clerk should be attached to each Sessions Court whose duty it should be to take down in shorthand the Judge's charge as it is delivered and whose transcript of the charge, when signed by the presiding Judge, should form part of the record.

Note by Maharaja Sir Jotindro Mohun Tagore Bahadur, K.C.S.I.

I sign the Report subject to the note recorded below.

I agree with my Colleague, Sir Romesh Chunder Mitter, Kt., in the opinions he has expressed in paragraphs 1 and 2 of his note appended to the Report, so far as they relate to the extension of trial by jury to other offences. I agree that all offences in the Sessions Court in jury districts should be made triable by jury save those which may be specifically excepted by the Local Government. Primâ facie I see no reason why a majority of the offences which now come before the Sessions Court, and which are comparatively of a less serious nature than those included in Chapters 8, 17, 18, etc., of the Indian Penal Code, should not also be made triable by jury, especially as some experienced Government officials have themselves recommended the extension of trial by jury to those offences. I also agree in the opinion expressed in paragraph 3 of the aforesaid note regarding the importance of keeping a full and accurate record of the Judge's charge to the jury, but I am not sure how far the means suggested by my learned Colleague in paragraph 4 of his note are likely to secure practically the object aimed at.

From—H. J. S. Cotton, Esq., C.S.I., Chief Secy. to the Government of Bengal,
To—The Secretary to the Government of India, Home Department.

The Lieutenant-Governor has been furnished unofficially with a copy of the Report of the Jury Commission, and feels bound, in accordance with the recommendation of the Commission, to withdraw the notification of this Government, dated 20th October 1892, making certain alterations in the classes of cases which are triable by a Jury in the districts to which the Jury system has been extended, at once. His Honour would have taken action in this direction on his own authority, were it not that he had already referred the question to the Government of India and had acted under the authority of the Government of India in issuing the notification. He considers therefore that the notification should be withdrawn with the authority of His Excellency the Governor-General in Council, and awaits the receipt of orders to this effect.

No. 357, dated Calcutta, the 28th March 1893.

From—C. J. Lyall, Esq., C.I.E., Secretary to the Govt. of India, Home Dept.,
To—The Chief Secretary to the Government of Bengal.

In reply to your letter No. 1523J., dated the 25th instant, I am directed to say that the Governor-General in Council authorizes the issue of a notification by His Honour the Lieutenant-Governor, under section 269 of the Criminal Procedure Code, withdrawing the notification of the 20th October 1892, by which certain changes were made in the classification of offences triable by Jury before the Courts of Session in the districts of the 24-Parganas, Hooghly, Burdwan, Murshidabad, Nadia, Patna, and Dacca, and restoring the classification of offences so triable in those districts which was in force prior to the issue of that notification.

JUDICIAL.

Dated Calcutta, the 25th March 1893.

UNDER Rule II of the Regulations which have been framed by the Governor-General in Council with the sanction of the Secretary of State under section I(4) of the Indian Councils Act, 1892, for Bengal, it has been laid down that the nomination to seven seats in the Council of the Lieutenant-Governor for making Laws and Regulations shall be made by the Lieutenant-Governor on the recommendation of the following bodies and associations respectively, viz.—

A.—The Corporation of Calcutta;

B.—Such Municipal Corporations or group or groups of Municipal Corporations other than the Corporation of Calcutta as the Lieutenant-Governor may from time to time prescribe by Notification in the Calcutta Gazette;

C.—Such District Boards, or group or groups of District Boards, as the Lieutenant-Governor may from time to time prescribe as aforesaid;

D.—Such Association or Associations of merchants, manufacturers or tradesmen as the Lieutenant-Governor may from time to time prescribe as aforesaid;

E.—The Senate of the University of Calcutta:

Provided that the bodies described above under A, B, C, D, and E, respectively, shall each (except as hereinafter provided in Rule VII) have at least one Councillor nominated upon its recommendation, and A, D, and E not more than one each.

With reference to the above proviso, it has been decided that District Municipalities and District Boards shall each be ordinarily represented by two members.

2. Under Rule V (c) of the same Regulations, it has been laid down that the recommendation of a person for nomination by the Lieutenant-Governor shall be made "in the case of a group of Municipal Corporations, District Boards, or Associations by the majority of votes of representatives to be appointed according to such scale as the Lieutenant-Governor may from time to time prescribe by the Corporations, Boards, or Associations."

3. The Corporation of Calcutta and the Senate of the University of Calcutta will now be asked by a separate communication to recommend a person for nomination by the Lieutenant-Governor. The votes of the Commissioners of the Corporation of Calcutta will be given at a meeting of the Commissioners. Those of the Fellows of the Senate will be given by voting papers to be delivered personally to the Registrar, or forwarded by post under certain conditions. The Bengal Chamber of Commerce are already represented on the Council by the Vice-President of their body, the Hon'ble Mr. Playfair, and no steps can be taken under clause D of the Rule II above quoted until he resigns his appointment or the term of his office expires.

4. The following observations exclusively refer to the arrangements which will now be made regarding the nomination to the four seats which will be made by the Lieutenant-Governor on the recommendation of District Boards and of Mufassal Municipalities.

5. The Lieutenant-Governor has decided that both District Boards and Municipalities shall be grouped together separately division by division, and that the District Boards and Municipalities within each divisional area shall take it in turns to exercise the privilege which is now bestowed on them of recommending a person for nomination to the Council. It is proposed that this privilege should be exercised by the groups of Municipalities and District Boards in each Division according to rotation. The following is a sketch of the form which the rotation may probably assume: but the Lieutenant-Governor cannot bind himself or his successor as to the exact order in which the privilege will in future be exercised:—

Date of election.	Municipalities.	District Boards.
1893	Presidency Division	... Patna Division.
	Rajshahi Division	... Chittagong Division.
1895	Burdwan Division	... Dacca Division.
	Orissa Division Chota Nagpur Division	... Bhagalpur Division.
1897	Patna Division	... Presidency Division.
	Chittagong Division	... Rajshahi Division.
1899	Dacca Division	... Burdwan Division.
	Bhagalpur Division	... Orissa Division.
1901	Presidency Division	... Patna Division.
	Rajshahi Division	... Chittagong Division.
	and so on.

The necessary notification will now be published in the Calcutta Gazette specifying the groups of District Boards and Municipalities in the Divisions from which a recommendation will be made to the Lieutenant-Governor for the nomination to four seats in Council in 1893.

6. The Lieutenant-Governor is pleased to prescribe the following procedure under which each District Board and Municipality concerned shall, for the purpose of making its recommendation, proceed to elect from amongst its own members an electoral representative, who shall be entrusted with full powers to vote for a member to represent the group in Council.

7. In respect of Municipal Corporations, it has been determined that only those municipalities which enjoy a clear income from municipal resources proper of Rs. 5,000 and over shall exercise the right of electing an electoral representative. The voting power of each of these representatives will be calculated by the income of the municipalities concerned according to the following scale:—

	Votes.
Municipalities with an income of Rs. 5,000 and less than Rs. 10,000 will be entitled to	1
Municipalities with an income of Rs. 10,000 and less than Rs. 20,000 to	2
Municipalities with an income of Rs. 20,000 and less than Rs. 50,000 to	3
Municipalities with an income of Rs. 50,000 and less than Rs 1,00,000 to	4
Municipalities with an income of Rs. 1,00,000 and less than Rs. 1,50,000 to	5
Municipalities with an income of Rs. 1,50,000 and less than Rs. 2,00,000 to	6
Municipalities with an income of Rs. 2,00,000 and less than Rs. 2,50,000 to	7
Municipalities with an income of Rs. 2,50,000 and over to ...	8

Each Municipality will elect one electoral representative only, and this representative shall be entitled to exercise all the votes of the Municipality which he represents.

8. All districts are considered by the Government to be of approximately equal importance, and each District Board will appoint one representative having one vote.

9. According to the scales above laid down, the following Municipal Corporations and District Boards will now proceed to elect their electoral representatives as follows:—

10. Under Rule IV of the Regulations quoted, the Lieutenant-Governor now desires that intimation may be at once communicated by the Commissioners of the Divisions concerned to the Chairmen of all the Municipalities and District Boards enumerated in the above lists, requesting them to arrange without delay for the convention of a special meeting of each District Board and Municipality concerned at which one of their members may be elected to represent them for the purpose of recommending the nomination of a member in the Lieutenant-Governor's Council. The name of the electoral representative elected in each must be reported at once by the Chairman of the local body concerned for the information of the Commissioner of the Division.

11. The period of two months which is contemplated under Rule VII of the Regulations as the period within which a recommendation shall be made to the Lieutenant-Governor is hereby declared to run from the date on which the Commissioner of the Division issues his invitation to the Chairman of any Municipality or District Board within the group concerned to elect one of their members to represent them for the purpose of recommending the nomination of a member in the Lieutenant-Governor's Council.

12. As soon as the electoral representatives are elected by the local bodies concerned, they will be called upon by the Commissioner of the Division to meet together on an early and convenient date with special reference to the limit of time imposed under rule VII of the Regulations, and at such convenient place as he may specify, for the purpose of electing by a majority of votes a person whom they will recommend to the Lieutenant-Governor to be nominated as a member of the Council. The names of all candidates put forward at such meeting shall be duly proposed by one of the electoral representatives present. The election shall be by ballot, and the person elected must obtain a majority of the votes of the representatives present. If on occasion of the first ballot an absolute majority is not obtained, the candidate who obtains the least number of votes shall be withdrawn from the election, and another ballot shall then be held for the remaining candidates, and so on until an absolute majority is obtained.

The electoral representatives present at this meeting shall elect among themselves a Chairman, who shall preside and be responsible for the fair and proper exercise of the ballot vote.

As soon as the election is made, the Chairman of the meeting shall without delay report to the Commissioner of the Division the name of the person so elected with the number of votes obtained and any other information which it may appear desirable to communicate, and on behalf of the meeting shall recommend to the Lieutenant-Governor to nominate for Council the person so elected. The Commissioner shall submit the report from the Chairman of the meeting, with any observations he may wish to add, to the Chief Secretary to Government, by whom the recommendations will be submitted to the Lieutenant-Governor.

13. Attention is drawn to the following Rule VI of the Regulations which have been framed by the Governor-General in Council and Secretary of State:—

VI.—It shall be a condition in the case of any person to be recommended by a Municipal Corporation or group of Municipal Corporations that he shall be a person ordinarily resident within the Municipality or the district in which it is situated, or in some one of the municipalities constituting the group or of the districts in which they are situated. A similar condition shall also apply to persons to be recommended by District Boards.

Under this rule it is not necessary that persons recommended shall be members of any Municipality or District Board concerned, but they must be ordinarily resident within the division from which the recommendation is made. Subject to this condition, the rules declare no limit of qualification, and it is left to the electoral representatives to recommend a person under Rule V(c) according to the majority of their votes.

14. The Lieutenant-Governor is anxious to ensure the success of the operation of the new rules, and with this object has been careful to provide that all the subsidiary arrangements now sanctioned shall, as far as possible, be given effect to by the local bodies concerned with the minimum of official interference He is confident, however, that District Magistrates will afford any assistance that may be required and do their utmost to facilitate the smooth working of the elections. The experiment now being tried is one of considerable importance, and the arrangements made are necessarily of an experimental character, and will be reconsidered if experience shows that they require modification.

ORDERED that a copy of this Resolution be furnished to all Commissioners for information and guidance and for communication to all the District Boards and Municipalities in their Divisions.

Ordered also that a copy be published in the Calcutta Gazette.

Ordered also that a copy be submitted with a covering letter to the Government of India for information.

By order of the Lieutenant-Governor of Bengal,

H J. S. COTTON,

Chief Secretary to the Government of Bengal.

APPOINTMENT OF A COMMITTEE TO REPORT ON THE MEDICAL NEEDS OF CALCUTTA.

RESOLUTION.

No. 1134Med.

Calcutta, the 28th March 1893.

READ—

Report on the Calcutta Medical Institutions for 1891.

RESOLUTION.—The question of providing suitable and sufficient accommodation for the gratuitous treatment of the sick-poor in Calcutta, whether as out-door or in-door patients, is one which has for many years engaged the attention of the Government of Bengal, while it has more lately attracted the notice of the Government of India who in July last intimated their opinion that the existing provision for the medical relief of the poorer inhabitants of Calcutta was still inadequate.

2. The Northern and Central portion of the city are fortunate in possessing a large number of excellent medical institutions, and their usefulness has frequently been acknowledged; but even in this part of the town there is a large tract in the north-east, where no public hospital or dispensary exists. On the other hand, with the exception of the Presidency General Hospital, which does not admit native cases, and the Military Hospitals, European and Native, which are necessarily exclusive, there is no institution south of Government House which provides accommodation for in-door patients. Dispensaries exist, it is true, for the out-door relief of the sick which are supported either by Government, the Municipality, or private benevolence, but useful and beneficent as their operations are, they cannot supply the place of a hospital for the treatment of the sick in the large area which lies south and east of the Calcutta Maidan.

3. In these circumstances, the Lieutenant-Governor has decided that a small Committee should be formed to consider and report upon the whole subject, and he is pleased to nominate as members the Hon'ble J. Lambert, C.I.E., and Surgeon Lieutenant-Colonel A. Crombie with Surgeon Colonel J. G. Pilcher, Inspector-General of Civil Hospitals, as their President, with power to add to their number. It will be the duty of these gentlemen to submit with as little delay as possible a report with a map showing what accommodation now exists, and what additional accommodation they consider to be necessary both for out-door and in-door patients. They should lay down what is in their opinion the maximum distance within which each resident of the town should be able to find medical relief, and they should indicate what parts of the city do not satisfy this principle, and where, therefore, new dispensaries or hospitals are required. They should also, after looking to the population which an institution so situated will serve, frame an estimate of the number of beds to be provided in each for the accommodation of males and females, but the question of cost of construction, or the source from which the funds for maintaining the institution should be drawn, need not be considered by them at the present stage. When this report has been received, the Lieutenant-Governor will be in a position to decide whether, and to what extent, an urgent need exists for more dispensaries or hospitals in the metropolis of Bengal.

By order of the Lieutenant-Governor of Bengal,

J. A. BOURDILLON,

Offg. Secy. to the Government of Bengal.

Explanation.—.. indicates that no rain has fallen. If the return for any day has not been received, the corresponding space is left blank. If any of the returns are wanting, the corresponding spaces in the total rainfall columns are left blank. With reference to the column of rainy days, the definition of a rainy day is when at least 1 inch of rain has fallen.

CALCUTTA, the 28th March 1893.

SUMMARY OF THE METEOROLOGICAL AND RAINFALL OBSERVATIONS TAKEN IN BENGAL FOR THE WEEK ENDING 8 A.M., SATURDAY, THE 25TH OF MARCH 1893.

DURING the previous week a continuous and rather rapid fall of pressure had occurred, and the distribution had completely changed from what it had previously been, and at the close of the week pressure was low over the western and north-western parts of the province, and comparatively high in South-East Bengal, and on the whole the distribution resembled that which usually obtains in the hot weather months. On the 19th pressure had risen slowly at the western stations, and fallen over the remainder of the province, but generally over Northern India the pressure changes were irregular, and a feeble area of low pressure existed in North-West India near the hills. This pointed to the existence of rather disturbed conditions over the whole of Northern India, and on this day a number of local hot weather storms or nor'-westers occurred in all districts of Bengal except Orissa, the rainfall from which was rather heavy, and was reported on the morning of the 20th. From the 19th to the 20th pressure began to fall at all except a few of the south-eastern stations, the fall being brisk in Bihar, while at the same time a barometric depression had appeared in Chota Nagpur, South Bihar and the neighbouring districts of the North-West Provinces. Again, therefore, conditions continued disturbed, and numerous local storms occurred in Bengal, and on the morning of 21st the majority of stations, except in Orissa and parts of Bihar, reported rain. On the 21st the low pressure area had apparently advanced slowly in an easterly direction, and a very shallow depression covered the western half of the province. Hence again conditions remained very disturbed in Bengal; local storms continued numerous, and a large number of stations reported rainfall on the 22nd. From the 21st to the 22nd the shallow depression had again advanced in an easterly direction, partially filling up in its advance, and two feeble residual low pressure areas existed, one in Orissa and one in North Bengal and Assam. The disturbed conditions therefore still existed in Bengal, and numerous local storms occurred, and on the morning of the 23rd rainfall was again reported in Orissa, South-West Bengal and East Bengal, though the remainder of the province had become almost rainless. On the morning of the 23rd, however, a rather rapid increase of pressure had taken place over the whole province, and the residual low pressure areas, which had existed on the 22nd, had disappeared, though the actual pressure recorded over the province was still in moderate defect of the normal. With the disappearance of the actual depressions, however, weather immediately began to improve, the sky rapidly cleared, a dry north-westerly and westerly wind current set in over the whole province, and rainfall entirely ceased. A further moderate increase of pressure took place on the 24th, which made pressure in excess of the normal of the day at almost all stations, while again on the 25th a further moderate increase of pressure took place, and it became in excess of the normal by amounts ranging up to nearly a tenth of an inch in the west of Bihar, and pressure became very uniform over the whole province, while over the greater part of Bengal a dry westerly wind current was blowing. The first half of the week was therefore stormy and wet with rather heavily clouded skies, and the second half fine and dry and with almost cloudless skies, but throughout the week temperature has again been much below the normal for the period.

Pressure—Has been very decidedly low for a considerable part of the week, and hence the mean pressure has been in distinct defect of the normal. This defect has usually equalled from 0·05″ to 0·07,″ and it has been fairly uniform over the whole province.

Temperature.—Owing to the rather heavy rainfall in the first half of the week and to the cool dry north-westerly and westerly wind which was blowing for the last three days of the week, temperature has again been largely in defect of the normal. Indeed on the morning of the 25th the mean temperature reported was from about 8° to 11° below the normal of the day. Hence for the whole week the mean temperature has been in defect of the normal, the defect equalling about 5°, while in South Bihar and Chota Nagpur it has equalled 6°.

The distribution of temperature for the week and its variation from the normal value are best seen in the table below, where the average maximum, minimum and mean temperatures for the week at nine typical stations in different districts of the province are compared with the normal values for the period. The defect during the week, it will again be seen, has been considerably larger in the day than in the night temperatures :—
